ACTION IS POSTPONED

Committee Sets Two Dates To Hear Complaints And Objections

The Probe committee on May Queen elections will hold a meeting in the Dramatic club rooms at the Temple at 4 o'clock Tuesday and 5 o'clock Thursday at which time advocates and opponents of the proposed changes in the May Queen elections will have an opportunity to appear and state their arguments.

Members of the committee are: Munro Kezer, chairman, Marjorie Sturdevant, Clara Olson, Irene Davies, Bruce Thomas and Joyce Ayres.

Discussion of the May Queen elections was the main topic at the meeting of the Student Council yesterday afternoon in the Temple. Although no definite action upon the subject was made, a committee was appointed by President Eldred Larson to meet at 5 o'clock Thursday and 4 o'clock Tuesday in the Dramatic club rooms to hear arguments for and against changing the election system of the May Queen.

The committee as appointed consists of three men and three women. Munro Kezer was appointed as chairman. The other members of the committee are Marjorie Sturdevant, Clara Olson, Irene Davies, Bruce Thomas and Joyce Ayres.

Kezer Favors Change A motion was made by Munro Kezer that the Student Council go on record as favoring changes in the election and a committee be appointed to hear all discussions both pro and con by student representatives. The motion was passed unanimously.

In opening the discussion of the change in the election system of the May Queen, President Larson cautioned the body as to the seriousness of the situation and asked that the council take the matter

Zoology Department Menagerie Now Consists of Squirrels, Rats and Mice

Consisting mainly of squirrels, rats and mice, the menagerie at Bessey hall is very limited at present. All animals less commonly seen have died during the winter and new ones have not been obtained. "I killed by cutest pet by accidentally dropping the cage door on her the other day," lamented Otis Wade, zoology instructor, in referring to a particularly tame ground squirrel.

Twenty Squirrels Remain There remain about twenty ground squirrels, one amber-colored pocket mouse, and several active little white-footed deer mice who obligingly go through a succession of quick somersaults in the air for the benefit of observers.

The ground squirrels include two nutcracker types, the Franklin and the golden-striped, besides the Wyoming marmot squirrel and the Wyoming squirrel often called "picket pin," due to its upright position which causes resemblance to a stake in the ground. All of these animals have come out of winter hibernation.

"There may be a number of loads in the pen on the south side of the building," said Mr. Wade. "Twelve spade-foot toads from Colorado Springs were put there last summer, but I haven't seen them for some time. These toads, with digging spurs on their hind feet, may have burrowed into the ground and are staying there. I haven't seen 'Buto,' the big hop toad, either. He was a cute and observing fellow."

"Buto" May Be Gone Mr. Wade explained that there was screening under-ground which would prevent animals from getting away if they did burrow into the earth. However, some boys broke into the cage last summer for a sand turtle, and "Buto" may have escaped, too. He was too large for the turtle to eat, although it may have bitten some of the spade-foot toads.

There are about fifteen or twenty white rats with bright pink eyes, which are used by Mr. Munter in parasitology. Cats in various stages of preservation and dissection are kept by the class in vibrate anatomy. Each member obtains his own specimen.

Duly Enrolled Kahki-Clad Men Loiter on Steps

Assuming that men attending the University are included in the general use of the term "student" it is obvious that someone at Nebraska hall has been caught in a lie. There can be no doubt as to the existence of the statement. It is printed in black and white, and is posted conspicuously on the door of the main entrance. The legend reads, "Students Do Not Loiter on These Steps." Part of the time the sign is not visible because of khaki-clad members of "the army" standing in front of it.

The only justification for the statement may be in the author's intention to be ironic. In that case, the meaning to be inferred is that persons loitering on the steps are not students. Perhaps that accounts for their efforts to hide the sign from public view. They may be ashamed of the fact that they are not students.

But whether the sign means that the loiterers are students, or whether it means that the author is simply stating a belief, remains to be seen. If it is a belief, it is clear that the belief is not justified.

Schulte, trainer "Doc" McLean and the student manager, Harold Miller, boarded their special Burlington car at 1:50 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, enroute for Austin and Dallas, Texas, where they will compete in the sixth annual Texas relay affairs, on tap for this coming Friday and Saturday.

Prospects for Cornhusker victories look quite bright, especially following the splendid marks made in last week's tryouts. The strength of the teams that will take part in the coming meets is unknown as this week's games will be the initial outdoor appearance of all Big Six schools as well as those in the south.

Others Are Promising

Ashburn and Rowley have both been hovering around the 45-foot mark, with their shot put heaves and should be in the running. Lamson, Fleming and Thompson, in the hurdle events have been holding their own and after their splendid performances at the Illinois shuttle relay, should score heavily.

Students Pore Over Magazines Of Better Type

Literary magazines of the Forum and Harper type are the most popular periodicals among university students. That is the opinion of Miss Mignon Almy, librarian in the magazine room at main library of the University. However, she tempered that statement by reminding that the University does not see fit to order True Story and Wild West Stories. Neither does it get the Saturday Evening Post or Colliers.

Leland Stresses Meditation

Pointing out how Jesus always preceded every great experience in secret communion with His father, Rev. Mr. Leland said: "When He was face to face with some great task, when He chose His ten apostles, when He went apart and alone into the wilderness or the mountains or in the quiet of some home to prepare for His work and this preparation is a clue to the marvelous courage and poise and strength of His life in every crisis."
