

THOMAS ORDERS MORE COPIES OF 1929 YEARBOOK

Cornhusker Receives Warm Welcome on Campus in First Day's Sale

CONTINUE DISTRIBUTION

Business Manager Arranges Time Extension Through Same Hours Today

With the prospect that the original supply of 1929 Cornhuskers will be gone by Thursday evening, Bruce Thomas, business manager of the publication, ordered 200 more copies Wednesday afternoon. At 2 o'clock the Cornhusker office was filled with students eager to get them.

Sales of 1929 Cornhusker have been greater than were expected, according to Thomas. Students may obtain Cornhuskers today from 9 until 5:30 o'clock at the Cornhusker office in the basement of University hall, in the main corridor of Social Sciences, and if the weather is favorable, in front of Andrews hall.

Approximately 1400 books were sold last fall when students had an opportunity to purchase or reserve Cornhuskers at a reduced price. The sale of the extra copies will continue today at $5.00 each until they are sold out, according to Thomas.

Receive Favorable Comment

"We have received some very favorable campus comment. Everyone seemed pleased with it," was the statement of Thomas in regard to the 1929 Cornhusker's campus reception.

The 1929 Cornhusker is one of the largest in years, containing about fifty pages more than last year's annual. William C. Mentzer, '29, Cheyenne, Wyo., is editor-in-chief, and Bruce H. Thomas, '29, Mound City, Mo., is business manager. Work on the book was started last fall and continued all through the year.

"Colorful" is the word that is being used to describe the 1929 Cornhusker. Campus buildings and scenes are done in natural colors, giving an attractive appearance. The art work there and all through the book is considered excellent.

Divided Into Books

The annual is divided into books, book one being on administration. The section is prefaced by a colorful picture of the east entrance of Administration building. In addition to pictures of the administrative officers of the University, the Board of Regents, chancellor and deans, the administration section contains pictures of these men at their desks and in typical laboratory and classroom scenes.

Book two is the junior and senior class sections, including pictures of class officers and the honorary organizations, Innocents and Mortar Board. Snapshots of campus events and prominent personages take a prominent place in book three. The snapshot editor of the Cornhusker has caught this year's campus life from the biggest rally of the year to fraternity dramas.

The society section, dramatics and music, student affairs, and publications are also in book three. These sections are complete, with no particular innovations.

Athletics Get Section

Book four deals with athletics. The athletic section contains snapshots and action pictures of varsity sports.

Walker Shows Possibilities In Country Paper

Journalism Instructor in University Discusses Fields of Work

MAKES FIVE DIVISIONS

Editor's note: The article following is the ninth of a series that will cover all the colleges of the University. The theme of the series is based upon the conditions in various fields that college graduates must face their first year out of school.

"Great possibilities may be found by the graduate of the School of Journalism in the small town newspaper field," declared Gayle C. Walker, acting director of the school, in commenting upon the opportunities for a young man or woman upon graduating from that school.

"That phase of work opens up a most satisfactory career. Satisfaction from two points of view—financial and the return in self-satisfaction and contentment. Self-satisfaction may be derived from the performing of community service which is certainly a part of the necessary duties to be fulfilled by a small town paper."

Mr. Walker stated that there were naturally important fields of newspaper work but the small town field is the most prospective to Nebraska graduates because of the nature of the state. If one were to graduate in a metropolitan state his goal would be the metropolitan newspaper field.

In general, there are five main

VETOES PROPOSITION CONCERNING FINANCE

Staff Representatives Refuse to Allow Elective Body Use of Funds Left by Defunct Societies; Raikes Appoints New Groups

Varsity Parties, under the management of a committee named by the Student Council, have been discontinued, according to action taken by the faculty committee on student organizations Tuesday. This information was presented to a meeting of the Student Council through a letter written to Ralph Raikes, president of the council, by Amanda Heppner, chairman of the committee.

The faculty committee also notified the Student Council that it had recognized the existence of a Barb council. The petition of the Barb council was taken directly to the faculty committee for approval instead of to the Student Council, according to custom.

The faculty committee on student organizations also vetoed a plan of the Student Council to use the surplus from the Junior-Senior Prom and the money in the treasury of abolished campus organizations for its own purposes.

Postpone May Queen Method of selecting the May Queen for next year was left hanging by the faculty committee. The Student Council had previously worked out a plan for the selection of the May Queen and had submitted it to the faculty committee for approval.

The letter from the committee on student organizations was considered at the regular meeting of the Student Council yesterday. The only other business conducted was the appointment of committees by Ralph Raikes.

Part of the letter which has to do with Varsity Parties follows: "The request to arrange for four Varsity Parties next year with closed night was rejected. Likewise, the dates submitted by Ray Sabata, the Varsity Party chairman, were not considered, for the reason that the committee decided to discontinue Varsity Parties and the direction of a Varsity Party committee, appointed by the Student Council.

Cite Committee's Failure "For the past three years the aforesaid committee has not been successful in the management of these parties from the standpoint of the receipts, and creating a demand for the events. The committee on student organizations further decided that since these parties were of great interest to the unorganized students on this campus that the Barb council was to have the authority to arrange for a series of parties next year.

"These parties will be scheduled in the university calendar and open to all students on the campus. The Barb council is to have permission to withdraw these scheduled events in case they are not a financial success. They have been given per-
