PRACTICE COURTS

High dirt embankments thrown up by a power digger will soon mark the trail of destruction through the newly constructed ten-nis courts east of the colliseum

The courts opened for use late last spring, must give way eventually before the plans for the extension of the new university heating system, terminating a block north of the coliseum.

Tennis courts, however, are not all that will suffer. Shrubbery, trees newly planted, grass, and i fact all greenery nearby has been uprooted, carried away, or buried for the present. Meanwhile tennis enthusiasts will have to be content to vent their vigor on the courts south of Beasey hall, of which there are only three in shape for use at present, or else try their patience upon those west of the colliseum.
