

Three Comedies Make Up Movie Menu; College Show at Stuart

Orpheum Presents 'The Cockeyed World,' a War Story; Devil Dogs With Hilarious Discourse Bring Laughter.

"Three big ones" for another big week of speaking shows. I'll tell "The Cockeyed World" that there are three big ones slated for the local screens starting Monday but you'll find that out before the week's over. "Why Bring That Up?" You want to know what they are? Well, it'd be no mystery, no, there are no mysteries programed for next week—nothing less than twenty some odd bits of hilarity. And here they are—Stuart: "The Sophomore"; Lincoln: Moran and Mack in "Why Bring That Up"; Orpheum: "The Cock Eyed World."

Though theater managers are usually skeptical about playing college pictures in college towns, I judge the Stuart manager is taking no chances on "The Sophomore." Eddie Quilan, the big shot of production, gets off some rare ones with his jazz dancing, sock jerking antics and besides, serves the big game for "dear ol' alma mater." And about that game, "Red" Grange commented after seeing the premier, "It's the most realistic football game I have ever seen on the screen." Italy O'Neil, Stanley Smith and Jeannette Loff furnish Eddie with play support.

"The Two Black Crows" Crow.
About a year ago, George Moran and Charles Mack attracted nationwide popularity with their Columbia disc entitled "Why Bring That Up?" (Two Black Crows No. 1). Now they are focused in the spotlight again with their first all talking picture by the same title. The Two Black Crows with their wholesome type of slow motion humor are amusing millions now where it was thousands before.

"Why Bring That Up?" was written by Octavus Roy Cohen, famous for his "Darktown Birmingham" stories appearing in the Saturday Evening Post, and has done no mean job on the dialogue for this rollicker. The Crows have also support from a selected cast headed by Evelyn Brent and Harry Green.

"What Price, Glory?"
No advance in admission we make, but "The Cock Eyed World" is a dandy at most any price. Down at Twelfth and P (that's the Orpheum) we discover a production opening Monday that we have waited not a short time to see. In fact I have been looking forward to it ever since I look-see "What Price, Glory." Now, I'll rule for Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe, the pair of leather-socks who made the silent masterpiece memorable.

These Devil Dogs are back again with not only their fast moving actions but also their hilarious discourse. You probably sighed when you imagined their conversations in "Glory"—now you'll get a big earful of it, actually. I may be wrong (apologies to John Bentley) but I'll put it ahead of every show in town for next week.

There's the dinner gong

LINCOLN THIS WEEK

"Boy if I was a worm that there Early Bird could get me a pleasure!"
And she nearly... She gets 'em into a... of trouble—the man... trouble they have, the... more fun you have!

You know them! The Two Black Crows! Over radio and phonograph records they have convulsed America with their "tired" comedy!
Now they've made their first all talking picture! It's the "head man"—all talking pictures ever made!
The story by Octavus Roy Cohen, great. You see Moran and Mack, on and off the stage. Hilariously funny either way! You see the Two Black Crows starred in a musical comedy filmed in dazzling color! You hear the radio hits "Snow, Snow, Boogie Woogie" and "Do I Know What I'm Doing?"
