Loring Speaks to Students on Life, Customs and Music of Early Indians

Relating his experiences with frontier Indians during the Roosevelt administration and displaying an expansive knowledge of Indian customs and music, Harold Loring, director of the Passion play, addressed university students at the regular Tuesday morning convocation.

Mr. Loring has lived on the distant borders of Canada and on the shores of the Gulf of Mexico. He has spent a great amount of time in the West and far East, studying the native American. In this work he found that the old "blanket Indian" had the real gift to give to posterity.

Sky Turns Blue. In the past as the eastern sky turned blue, and flaming red, the young men of the village would gather and after building a fire, would hold their cow-hide drums over the fire thus tuning them to the pitch that they desired. As the sun came up, the mothers would stand by their teepees facing the East and holding their children to the sun.

The wind is singing for the rain to come. All is gloomy, depressing. The future seems so uncertain. I don't know what it holds for you.

So it makes my heart very sad. Have Ceremonials. During the day there are many ceremonial songs and dances in gratitude to the Great Spirit whom they believe will forget them if they do not voice their words of thanks.

When death comes to the Indian he is wrapped in his blanket and followed by his relatives, friends and braves who wish him success on his last journey. He is taken to a grave which, unlike our own, is open and on a high trellis thus allowing his spirit to escape easily and to wend its way to the land of the setting sun.

Has Fallacy. The often called happy hunting ground is a fallacy and has erroneously created a wrong impression of the Indians' belief of the great beyond. When asked why he has not accepted the religion of the whites he said that he shall keep his belief in the Great Spirit, and believe as his forefathers have done until the white man has found only one way to go to the happy hunting grounds.

The real American undoubtedly has a great heritage to give to those who follow him in life, both physically and mentally. His legends, his leather and bead work and his music shall be recorded as the work of the real American.

HOME COMING STAMP DRIVE PROGRESSES

Chairman of Sale Predicts Success in Movement For Finances.

The sale of Homecoming stamps, sponsored by the Associated Women Students board, is coming to a successful finish, according to Helen Struble, chairman of the drive.

The spirit of unity and loyalty to the university is fostered by the association throughout its work. The board brings before its members subjects that are of importance and interest to college women.

A. W. S. is an organization to which all university women belong, and is governed by a board consisting of representatives from each of the three upper classes. It is the aim of this board to sponsor friendship among the women of the campus and offer to them means of getting together.

For this purpose, the board sponsors activities during the year. They attempt to introduce the women to vocations by bringing speakers to the university, and having round table discussions.

Point system is sponsored by A. W. S., and whose aim it is to prevent women from being too burdened with activities. It also distributes more widely the campus activities.

Socially, the board provides a tea early in the fall to help the freshmen to become acquainted. It also sponsors the women's Cornhusker costume party. The coed follies, a presentation of a number of skits for women only, is in charge of this organization.

COLORADO AGGIE ENROLLMENT IS RECORD BREAKER

FORT COLLINS—All but seven of the sixty-three counties in Colorado are represented in the record enrollment of the 1,389 young men and women students at the Colorado Agricultural college, according to the final report just received by President Charles A. Lory of the college from Registrar S. J. McCracken.

This enrollment is an increase of 11 per cent over the registration last year. In addition to the regular college registration, 126 young men and women are enrolled in the agricultural college conservatory of music.

One hundred and thirty-six high schools in Colorado are represented by Aggie students. Eighty students transferred to this institution from forty other colleges and universities throughout the country, including such schools as Harvard, Cornell and Wisconsin universities.

Twenty-nine other states and four foreign countries are represented in the enrollment. Including the conservatory of music, a total of 1,027 men and 468 women are attending the agricultural college.

Botany Teachers Spend Week End in Sandhills

Dr. R. J. Pool, chairman of the department of botany, and Dr. T. Steiger, instructor of the same department, spent last week end at the Nebraska national forest in the sandhills of Thomas county, near Halsey. They went to make the usual annual records on certain investigations that are being conducted in cooperation with the United States forest service at that point.

American Red Cross Courses Become Standards Taught in Many Colleges

Addressing an audience at Harvard last summer, an official of the American National Red Cross observed that multitudinous forces were striving continuously to penetrate the surrounding walls of the country's educational system, to impress it in some way, influence its trends, or utilize it otherwise.

The fact that these well springs of education are so guarded makes it especially significant that the American Red Cross is accepted at increasingly numerous points of contact between its services and those of educational bodies and institutions throughout the nation.

This association of the Red Cross with the nation's educational programs begins with earliest school years, and flourishes in the highest institutions. It ranges throughout a variety of Red Cross services of intense practicality.

Today, in physical education departments of leading universities, the American Red Cross course in swimming and life saving and first aid, is standard. Some of these courses originally were conducted by Red Cross representatives, and are now continued under experts trained and qualified according to Red Cross requirements.

Women's colleges not alone have adopted the Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick; and nutrition, but many give credit to completion, including extension credits to teachers who take these courses.

Summer courses in the fundamentals of junior Red Cross administration were given the past summer at 197 state universities and normal schools. The junior Red Cross "credit course" was given this year at teachers college, Columbia university, New York; George Peabody institute, Nashville, Tenn.; University of Wisconsin, and University of California.

Another Red Cross summer course in the atmosphere of a center of higher learning was afforded at the University of North Carolina, where Red Cross representatives gave first aid instruction, first to a police officer's group, which so impressed the head of the institution as to lead them to request special lectures to a class of athletics coaches, composed of students from nine states.

These university contacts of the Red Cross are fitting cap-stones to foundations laid in the primary grades and extending throughout high school and preparatory years, modifications of the aforementioned Red Cross courses being used, with credits granted by a number of schools for completion.

The combination of infusion of ideals of service with practical instruction enabling the individual student to render such service in a material as well as spiritual sense, makes the appeal of the Red Cross, it leads, as the student matures, to a deeper interest frequently exemplified in community service in later life. Here too, the Red Cross stands ready, its local chapters the medium for such service.

Strength of Red Cross activities is measured by general Red Cross membership, enrolled annually from Nov. 11 to 28.

Jayhawkers Invade Cornhuskerland Homecoming Day to Avenge Backsets

Kansas Pigsaw Luggers Win but Eight Contests in Thirty-six Years of Hard Gridiron Competition.

When the Kansas university Jayhawkers enter the portals of Memorial stadium next week in search of a gridiron victory, it will be the thirty-sixth time that the two conference eleven have met on the football field.

If past performances are any indication of what the outcome of the Husker-Jayhawk tilt will be, the final tally on Homecoming day this year should be large in favor of the Scarlet and Cream from Nebraska. In the thirty-five engagements between Kansas and Nebraska, the Cornhuskers have eked out exactly 25 victories, giving the crew from the Kaw eight and turning in a pair of tie games.

The eight Kansas wins, it so happens, have all been on Nebraska soil. Never has it been known for a Kansas team to best the Huskers at Lawrence, Nebraska's mighty Cornhuskers are doped to win the annual struggle next week not only due to performances in past years but to the showing made by the Bible team in its three inter-sectional games so far this season. To give a win to Kansas would end a period of thirteen years in which Nebraska has not allowed the eleven from Kansas a single victory. Kansas won her last victory from Nebraska in 1916.

Begin in 1892. To get a true picture of the Cornhusker supremacy over Kansas, one must refer back to musty records, mellowed with age, some of them almost crumbling at the touch of a hand. So far as existing records show, Kansas and Nebraska first met on the gridiron in the year 1892. In that initial encounter the Kansas eleven showed more than Nebraska and took the first game by the score of 12 to 0. Again in 1893 the Kansas team on an 8 to 0 victory and in 1894 the Scarlet Cornhuskers started their long march down the twenty-five football victories. They took that third game by a score of 14 to 6.

In the opening of the twentieth century Nebraska started playing such a superior brand of football that the Jayhawkers were taken off their feet and in more than 20 years only four victories were given to Kansas. In the twenty-five victories Nebraska has piled up a total of 706 points worth of touchdowns and goals to the 287 for her southern neighbor.

Only two years have passed by since the ancient eighties when the Cornhusker football warriors wore beards and long mustaches that the two conference schools did not play each other. In 1904 and in 1905 Kansas and Nebraska broke relations. A break was narrowly averted in 1905 when on the eve of the already historic encounter, Kansas officially claimed that two Nebraska players, namely Bender and Wilson were ineligible. Such claims caused dire consternation in the ranks and Kansas finally waived them. The game was played at Lawrence, and was featured by a 74-yard run in the last minute of play by none other than the same "Twister" Bender. The run was responsible for the only score of the game, which Nebraska won, 6 to 0.

Thereupon Kansas broke off relations with Nebraska, the news of the break preceding the Nebraska team home to Lincoln. Affairs then stood at an impasse for two years. Late in 1906, Kansas proposed to "kiss and make up" and the two football eleven met again in 1906. Kansas won the game, 8 to 6.

The only bad defeat a Jayhawk team ever handed the Cornhuskers was in 1908 when Kansas won 20 to 5. On the other hand scores of 35 to 0, and 47 to 13 abound on the winning side of the Scarlet and Cream from Nebraska. The last victory for Kansas was the 7 to 3 victory in 1916 but twice since then the games have been turned in. In 1920 a tie was turned in and in the dedication game of Memorial stadium in 1923, a tie game was played.

In 1923 the 0 to 0 game was the most bitterly fought game in which the two teams have ever played. It was the game which dedicated Memorial stadium. Great plans were made for that Homecoming battle and every Nebraska grad that lived within two hundred miles of Lincoln was in the stadium for the game. The dope predicted Nebraska a sure winner before the game and every Husker fan wanted a Nebraska victory for the dedication game. But after a terrific battle on the sod that afternoon, the Cornhuskers had to be satisfied with a scoreless tie. The scores in past years:
