Dr. Pound, Former Husker Dean, Is One of Group Proposing New Bible. Prominent Educators Send Letters Making Plea for A Modernized Religion to All Leaders of Thought.

Dean Roscoe Pound of the Harvard law school, and formerly dean of the college of law at the University of Nebraska, has affiliated himself with a movement to modernize church teachings, according to an article in the Harvard Crimson of recent date.

This letter has been sent to leaders of thought in all occupations and makes a plea for the modernization of religious teaching. The purpose of the new Bible is to rid modern man of the necessity of formal acceptance of many "mediaeval superstitions" in which all the great churches persist.

It is possible that the Declaration of Independence, Constitution, groups of noble, prophetic essays from men such as Emerson and Carlyle and poems of longing and vision from Lowell, Whittier and Tennyson, together with a few of Lincoln's addresses and other inspiring writings of our modern times might make this modern Bible, which is to be added to the ancient book, such that it would not suffer from comparison.

Prof. Werner Is Author of Book on 'Every College Student's Problems'

Editor's Note: The following is a brief review of Prof. O. H. Werner's new book "Every College Student's Problems" taken from a recent number of "schools," a magazine devoted to the school and educational interests. Professor Werner of the department of education has made this book a discussion of the problems of college life, study, and money which face every college freshman.

Accepting the axiom that the student comes to college to live, Prof. Werner states, "The college must be vitally interested in his activities twenty-four hours in the day and seven days in the week. His success or failure both in college and out of college must be measured in terms of his whole development and not merely by his achievements in scholarship. This does not imply that the college can or desires to supervise the activities of the student. On the contrary what the college must do is to enable the student to become as self-directive as possible."

Enjoyment Centers Discussed. "In suggesting how enjoyment centers may be built we said that the building of enjoyments should begin where one's interests lie. One should analyze what nature has given him for development. He should remember that enjoyments are largely marginal responses, that is, they come along with other activities in which he engages. Therefore, it is important that he pay much attention to the physical conditions under which affected English, and while at times there seems to be a little too much explanation of certain points, nevertheless anyone who knows college freshmen will realize that this plain talking and repetition is not wasted effort. The book contains a wealth of quotations from many other men who have touched upon the problems involved.

Miss Elizabeth Jones Appointed Art Teacher. Mrs. Elizabeth J. Jones has been appointed instructor of the juvenile art class conducted at Morrill hall in the school of fine arts. ... and that holds for careers, too! LOOK where you are going. It's a method that gets the hockey player through—and a business man on the way to success. The fellow who scores consistently is the one who picks his course. Yet many a man comes out of college, eager to make a name for himself in business, who has failed to look where he is going—who has no definite goal in sight. While you're still in college, study yourself above all else—analyze your interests and capabilities. Get all the help and advice you can from your faculty adviser. Pick the kind of work you'll like best. And after graduation—go to it!

he works, that he utilize the laws of learning to help him build desirable enjoyments, and that he associate with people whose enjoyments are of a high order. The book is full of good common sense and hard-headed practicality, as well as sympathy and understanding.
