ROBBINS SAYS LAWS SHOULD BE SMARTER

Legal Professor Says His Students Train Longer, Should Know More.

MATTER IS UNIMPORTANT

Law students should be smarter than other students, according to Prof. C. A. Robbins, of the law college faculty, because two more years of study are required of them than of the students in other colleges.

He stated that he had nothing to say about such a trivial matter as the relative smartness of law and "academy" students and dubbed the entire matter as a "kindergarten" question. His first statement to a Nebraska reporter was to the effect that he did not have such a good opinion of the "Rag."

Professor Robbins expressed chagrin that a law college student should "open up his mouth" to answer such a charge as "R. K. J." made. When the reporter persisted in questioning the professor as to whether law college professors were more intelligent than those in other colleges, Professor Robbins replied, "If they are, they are."

He stated that the number of degrees a professor has after his name means nothing.

Chancellor Welcomes Tourney Participants To University Campus

(Editor's Note: Chancellor Burnett issued the following statement in regard to the basketball tournament now in progress.)

The University of Nebraska welcomes to its campus the winners of the 1930 regional basketball tournaments. While each team is striving to win a class championship, I hope that every man in Lincoln for these three days will also acquaint himself with the state university and the desirability of acquiring a university training.

There are in the University of Nebraska this semester some 6,000 men and women, most of whom came from Nebraska. Many of them came from cities and towns represented in this championship play. Some of them first visited the University as players in previous tournaments. I hope that you follow their example and acquaint yourselves with the opportunities and possibilities offered by the departments of this state institution.

Cordially yours,
Signed
E. A. BURNETT,
Chancellor.

'College Joes' List Faults of 'Josephine' But Admit They Are Helpless Before Feminine Wiles

By JACK ERICKSON

Much like the worm that turns, the masculine sex of this campus has taken arms against a host of coed criticisms and retaliate with some equally trite sayings. According to the men who know, there is no flawless coed, in fact some of them have some marked faults. But despite their protests, the men in general admit that they are helpless before the wiles of feminine intrigue and cunning.

Who would've believed it! Josephine College is really guilty of some misdemeanors which are of striking consequence. Prominent men about the campus in ten different fraternities find various faults with our girls students. It is generally conceded that they are "dumb" and "sophisticated." They are strikingly "expensive" and several state that the girls evidence an "appalling lack of experience."

"Wild for a Dtes"
In addition to being "wild for dates" the coeds "try to play too many men at once," and seem to be here "only for a good time."

Certain of the men lament the fact that the femmes "want too much attention," and some say that the "filippant feminine air" is most alarming.

But let us not decry our feminine friends to too great an extent, for the men are also able to find some rather likable aspects to their natures. "Women make school worth while," stated one erstwhile observer. The boys in general feel that the "wims" are "high minded," "good sports," and that they offer a "diversion" which some are wont to call love. One ambitious man student says that the three good points of women are "their faces, figures, and voices."

Are Not Worth Price.
"All in all, are the women worth the price which we men pay?" was the question asked the men interviewed. Quite unambiguously the men answered, "No, but we do need dancing partners, and they come in handy once in a while."

The "long dress fad" was quite favorably received by the stronger sex, for differing reasons. Out of the entire group questioned, only two took opposition to the trailing skirts. The others thought that long dresses "give the girls a

COCHRAN BELITTLES COED CHARM THEORY

History Professor Thinks Girls Must Earn Grades.

"There is nothing to it," states Roy E. Cochran, associate professor of American history at the University of Nebraska, in referring to Dr. Laird, Colgate professor's criticism that coeds get good marks by personal attraction and bluffing rather than study.

"Students don't see their instructors enough to really get acquainted with them. Every student should talk over legitimate things with his professor but usually students are afraid of being accused of working for good grades and keep clear of their professors," Professor Cochran said. "I very often have to send for people who should know enough to come in and see me."

Master Approach
Professor Cochran laughed when he read the statement that good looking girls had a "master approach." "Of course there are a few that try it," he said, "but they don't get far, at least not with me." An average of Professor Cochran's classes show that he falls more good looking girls than men.

"My three highest grades for last semester went to men, and they weren't fraternities men either, they aren't good looking girls, are they?" he asked.

MYERS ADDRESSES PRE-MEDIC GROUP

Gives Talk On Theories of Medicine At Monthly Banquet.

Dr. John T. Myers, associate professor of bacteriology at the University of Nebraska college of medicine, spoke to the Pre-Medic group at their monthly banquet Wednesday evening at the Grand hotel. Music was provided during the dinner by Robert Thornburgh.

The lecture outlined in brief the various theories concerning medicine which have been held since the time of the Greeks. It was early believed that disease was an evil spirit, and to gain health, it was necessary to placate the evil spirit.

According to Hippocrates the body contained four fluids or humours which maintained a bodily balance. These fluids were blood, phlegm, black and yellow bile. According to this theory a man might lose his health because he had too much blood, and in such a case a leech would be used to extract blood.

Another theory that has grown up is that of homeopathy and the allopaths. They believed in giving a large dose of everything. The allopaths said "disease is a break in the vitalistic process."

Bacteriology has grown out of germ theory, and is very recent. A French physician in 1800 discovered that by pouring a hot alcoholic liquid on a wound, it healed more quickly. This was in reality the discovery of antiseptic surgery.

Dr. Myers spent the major part of his address in a discussion of Louis Pasteur, and the experiments carried out by that famous Frenchman. Dr. Myers showed that much of modern medicine has only recently been discovered, and indicated that the field of medicine is an inspiring field of accomplishment.

Principals of Kosmet Play Will Inspect Place of Reform Saturday.

SEEK SHOW POINTERS

Kosmet Klub will take its "Sob Sister" cast through the Nebraska State penitentiary Saturday morning, according to arrangements completed Thursday evening by the club. Acts one and three of the 1930 spring musical comedy take place in a prison and directors of the show felt that an inspection of the penitentiary would be profitable to the actors.

Members of the cast will meet at the Kosmet Klub rooms at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Transportation will be furnished to the penitentiary by Kosmet Klub, and the party will be conducted through the prison by authorities.

Donald Kelly, president of Kosmet Klub; Carl Hahn, production manager; and William McCleery, author of "Sob Sister" will accompany the club's plans were made at the Alpha Tau Omega house and consent of state authorities was given Thursday.

George Turner, former member of the Kosmet Klub and Sigma Nu fraternity, attended Thursday evening's rehearsal of "Sob Sister." He is employed in the state capitol and assisted the club in arranging the prison inspection trip.

"If we manage to keep the 'sob sisters' from acting like sob sisters," stated Bill McCleery, author of the show, "the trip ought to be successful."

Deafness Presents No Terrors To Donald Bavis, Chemistry Senior, Who Has Not Heard Since Eleven

By HARL N. ANDERSON.

Instructors complain now and then that students pay no attention to what they have to say, and give every indication of not having heard the least part of their lecture. As a matter of fact, there is at least one individual in the university who has never heard a syllable spoken in the classroom during the three and a half years that he has been matriculated at Nebraska.

Donald Bavis, Lincoln, a senior in the department of chemistry, has been deaf since the age of 11 years, when he was in the sixth grade at Bryant school. His affliction followed a severe attack of scarlet fever.

"Being deaf and in the university," Bavis recently stated in a written interview, published in the Omaha World-Herald, "has no special difficulties providing one has a definite purpose and is willing to work a little harder than is ordinarily required. I've found the professors on a whole to be very fair and willing to meet me half way."

Likes Teachers.
Donald also holds in the highest regard all teachers whom he has known in Lincoln high school. He declares that he should never have been able to continue his school work and come to the university without their cooperation and sympathetic understanding of his new problem.

Enrollment as a freshman at Nebraska in the fall of 1926 was a dismaying and discouraging experience for the youth. "To any student the days of his first registration linger in his mind as a sort of nightmare," he commented. "Imagine what it seemed like to a fellow that couldn't even inquire which way to go. I sat around the coliseum half a day before I could muster up courage enough to find out at which end of the cyclone I should start."

Registration Difficult.
"I finally located Doctor Waite, an old friend of the family, and he got me headed in the right direction. Even then I didn't have the slightest idea as to what it was all about. The details of the rest of the trip through the aisles are a hazy impression of flying paper, rushing students and long tables."

Points that the deaf boy has to be on the outlook for are to find someone in the classroom whose notes he can depend upon; to arrange with the instructor for that person to sit next to him; to get advanced assignments and notes of assignments; "and above all, not to get rattled when something out of the ordinary routine happens as it sometimes does."

Hadcidpad Often Concealed.
Bavis declared that he has gone through many classes with only one or two students learning that he was deaf, and then only because he told them. Sometimes, however, he has to give himself away.

"For instance," he remarked, "a year ago I had a class in the (Continued on Page 2.)"

SCHRAMM COMMENTS JOURNALISTIC WORK

Advises Members of Sigma Delta Chi to Pursue Newspaper Task.

"If you like newspaper work—stay with it," was the statement made by Prof. E. F. Schramm to members of Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity, at its meeting Thursday evening. Professor Schramm's talk followed a dinner at the Theta Chi fraternity house.

Commenting on his journalistic experience in college, Professor Schramm called newspaper work the most interesting of any he knew. Despite the fact that reporters are often under paid, the geology professor encouraged members of Sigma Delta Chi to continue their work, provided it was as much an avocation as a vocation to them.

Names Requirements
"There are four requirements which I consider essential to a newspaper man," explained Professor Schramm. "He must be energetic, honest, capable and fearless."

Difficulties encountered by reporters in their attempt to be mentally fearless were cited by the speaker. The fact that individual thinking and writing often causes the reporter to lose his job was called to the attention of the journalists.

Professor Schramm related several stories concerned with errors in reporting and proof reading, which had caused cities to laugh at the newspaper and the persons concerned in the garbled stories. Clippings from current newspapers were used by the speaker in his informal comments.

After the regular talk, members of Sigma Delta Chi held a brief business meeting. It was decided by the journalistic fraternity that in the coming election of officers, nominations would come from the floor instead of from a nominating committee of senior members. Plans for the annual Founders day banquet were also discussed.

Delta Chi Auxiliary Is Organized Sunday

Delta Chi Auxiliary with membership composed of mothers and sisters of members of the fraternity and wives of the alumni was formed last Sunday. Nineteen were present at the meeting. The organization plans to meet the first Tuesday of each month.
