Assumption of Slacker Role Is Unpardonable Sin When Students At Ag College Prepare for Fair

By Boyd Von Seggern.

An unpardonable sin on the college of agriculture campus is the assumption of the role of slacker by any student during preparation for Farmers Fair.

In 1920, the first Farmers Fair after the war, one of the students for which an admission charge was made.

With a clearance of $1,000, the 1924 event is recorded as the most prosperous fair yet held.

Deserter Tubbed. It wasn't mob rule that governed the situation, present officials pointed out, but all of the other students took enough time to drop their tools.

Farmers Fair is scheduled, Janke added, because of the loyal co-operation that every student gives to it.

The first fair of the farm campus was held in 1916. It drew a crowd of 500 then and was considered a success.

Entertaining, now, over 10,000 people, students in the college of agriculture have gained recognition for staging the greatest extracurricular activity in the state.

In 1922, one of the most outstanding fairs was offered by the Schriepel, Margaret Koerting, and Herman Schuchman will demonstrate.

An exhibition in pharmacology, featuring the uses of crude animal and vegetable drugs, will be given by William Bogle, chairman, Wilmer Griess, and Willard Chandler.

Cosmetic Explanation. Cosmetics, used since ancient times, will be explained, and the powders, skin creams, and toilet waters analyzed.

FARMERS FAIR WORK PRAISED BY JACKSON

Veteran Secretary Gives Advice to Students At Rally.

"Truly a wonderful activity, an education in itself," George Jackson, secretary of the Nebraska state fair commented recently.

He was speaking of the value of Farmers Fair, twelfth annual exposition to be held at the college of agriculture on May 3.

With over fifty years of actual experience in fair management, Mr. Jackson is credited with knowing more about the intricacies of fairs than any other person. He has been "fair minded" since he was a young boy when he raised pigs in Nuckolls county and took them in for exhibition at the county fair at Nelson.

Organization and co-operation are the two biggest words in the dictionary," the secretary continued, "and you students in the college of agriculture are learning what they mean."

"Your problem is to entertain all classes of people; that is a big task. I always pick up new ideas when I attend Farmers Fair," Jackson related.

younger people than older were unhappy. Success in dramatics was found to be the most related to happiness, while music and poetry seemed to be a more common refuge for the unhappy.

A slight tendency toward unhappiness was found in those individuals with a better than average social environment during childhood and adolescence.

Dr. Watson stated that men believed themselves happier than women believe themselves to be, and the married are happier than the unmarried.
