

K. U. BOARD RATIFIES DEAN SHAAD'S REPORT

Code Adopted by Committee Sets Forth Stringent Eligibility Rules.

K. U. NOW IN BIG SIX

LAWRENCE, Kas., Dec. 9.—The University of Kansas athletic board after spending several hours yesterday listening to Dean George C. Shaad's report as faculty representative, approved his action which led to the reinstatement of Kansas in the Big Six.

This action, which came as a result of the action instigated by W. A. Tarr, of the University of Missouri, seems to have definitely brought to a close the squabble in the conference over the subsidization of athletics. Whether or not the action of the Kansas representatives is a concession to the other Big Six schools is a doubtful question, however.

Code Settles Authority.

The Big Six conference, of which Kansas is again a member, will place very stringent regulations on the colleges in its roster in order to comply with the requirements of the North Central Association of Colleges and Universities for membership.

This association, which has under its jurisdiction this section of the country, has placed very definite regulations on the conduct of its accredited conference members in the midwest territory.

The code states where the administration of the athletic policy should rest, and what authorities should be the final judges in the questioned matter.

Payment of money to students for services as athletes, hiring athletes or the equivalent of such procedure, maintenance of free training tables are not permissible," says the report.

No Special Offers Allowed.

It further prohibits the personal solicitation of prospective students by athletic coaches through the offering of special inducements, such as offers of money or jobs. The coaches must receive a salary commensurate with their services and cannot take more than a logical period for their athletics.

The report finally states that all athletic funds must be either audited or handled through the treasurer by the athletic office or handled through the institution's budget.

BETAS, TEKES REACH WATER POLO FINALS

WM Clash Thursday Night At 8 O'Clock For Championship.

Beta Theta Phi and Tau Kappa Epsilon will meet for the water polo championship in the Y. M. C. A. pool Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. This is the final game of the water polo schedule, which is a part of the intramural program.

Pi Kappa Alpha and Delta Sigma Phi will meet in a preliminary game to decide the third and fourth place rating.

The Tekes went into the finals by defeating the Pi Kappa Alpha team, last year's champion in a close match while the Betas came from behind in the second half to nose out the Delta Sigs. Both teams in the finals have displayed class throughout their schedules and the final game is expected to furnish plenty of competition.

Spectators will be admitted to the game for twenty-five cents. The charge will be made to assist in defraying the expenses of the tournament. Women, as well as men, can attend the game.

The Benchwarmer by Craig

PROBABILITY that Morris Fisher will not be in the lineup when Nebraska meets South Dakota on the basketball court at Vermillion Saturday night has caused a slight slump in Cornhusker stock.

Fisher is the outstanding forward on the Nebraska team and his loss will be keenly felt.

From the way things look so far, the Cornhusker team this year will give any opposing team quite a run for their money. Four veterans, all of them capable of playing a high grade of basketball, together with several promising recruits, are the men on whom Coach Charley Black will pin his faith during the season.

The Huskers will have the games with South Dakota and Pittsburgh before vacation, and the trip to the west coast during Christmas vacation under their belts before they tackle the conference schedule.

THE announcement that the team this week will make the trip by automobile is the first indication of the expense cutting program of the athletic officials.

While some may question the transporting of the team in automobiles, the members of the squad do not seem to be taking much interest in the matter.

It is granted that the department will not make the trip by car unless the school to be visited is close and the trip will not work any hardship on the players.

In the case of trips to Manhattan and one or two other Big Six schools, the train connections are so poor that it will be better to drive than take the train.

The athletic heads are not only saving money—they are making a wise step in providing automobiles for some of the trips.

GIRLS' intramural sports here at Nebraska are evidently growing in popularity.

According to some figures presented, there are twice as many girls out for sports now as in previous years, which is some increase.

The big trouble with the girls, as well as the fraternities, seems to be getting the members interested enough to compete.

Girls' sports are newer than men's sports and it is quite a problem to get the girls out for athletic teams.

The sweet, demure little things who lounge about sorority houses can hardly imagine themselves going out and actually competing in a sport. They think it destroys their feminine charm.

ONE plan that seems to me would be quite effective in getting girls out for sports would be to establish a certain group of requirements in each sport and in a letter system of some sort.

This might even be applied to fraternities.

Small emblems or pins might be given the girls who "lettered" in various sports. It would be possible to make the awards so attractive that each member would want to win one of them.

The trouble with the plan of giving an award to the girl in a sorority who makes the most points during the year is this: Other girls who do not have a chance for the trophy or are not adapted for several sports will not try for the trophy.

But if these small pins or emblems were given for each separate sport and were fairly hard to win, the girls would try hard in each sport and plenty of them would compete.

THE main thing is to stimulate the students' interest in the sport and have them compete because of this interest.

To be driven into the work spoils its beneficial effect.

The letter system to athletics here at Nebraska proves effective because athletes are interested and feel that it is an honor to wear a sweater. This builds up their interest in the sport.

Why can't the same thing be applied to fraternities and sororities in intramural sports?

never lived in one but has spent her four years in school in a private home. Miss Boyer pointed out that dormitories were used at the University of Kansas and other large schools and that they were successful in these places.

Present System "A Mess."

Nina Rossitto, a teachers college sophomore from Omaha, stated that if she wanted to live in a dormitory she would attend a girls' school. She attended a girls' school last year and came to Nebraska to escape dormitory life.

"Aren't Any Good."

Ula Moore, another student who has had experience with dormitory life, says, "I don't think they are any good. I don't believe they are a desirable place to live. There are too many girls and one doesn't get acquainted with very many, besides, dormitories do not provide

Historical 'Brown Derby' Serves as Dunce Cap for Law College Freshmen

BOULDER, Colo.—The antiquated and historical "Brown Derby" of the law school soon is to be mounted in glass after about fifteen years of usage, and a new one is to take its place.

The "Brown Derby" became a tradition among the lawyers about fifteen years ago, when Livingston Farrand was president of the university. At one of the regular assemblies, all of the freshman lawyers filed into the hall wearing brown derbies. However, instead of stopping at his seat, one man with an exceptionally small head walked up onto the platform and placed his little derby on the exceptionally large head of the president.

Since this incident, it has been customary for freshman law students who make the dumbest crack to wear the "Brown Derby."

The "dummy hat" changes heads every week. The award is made from a vote of the class which determines the dumbest remark for the week. Although the "Derby" appears to be an ink spot, it is only the innumerable signatures which so darken it. Upon the hat a homelike atmosphere. I prefer rooming houses."

Johanna Kollmorgen, an arts and science sophomore from West Point, said that students should not be compelled to live in dormitories. "I wouldn't like to be hurled into a big mob of girls and be obliged to do what they tell you to. Students wouldn't be satisfied with their conditions if they were compelled to live in dormitories against their will, and, besides, many students could not afford it," she said.

Prefers Smaller Units.

Mildred Bartosh, Dodge, a senior in teachers college, stated that she would not care for dormitories. "I prefer housing girls in smaller units," she stated. Genevieve Jefferies, a home economics freshman from Odell, echoed the same opinion. "I wouldn't care to live in such a large conglomeration of girls," Miss Odell said.

She stated, however, that she thought the present dormitories were a mess and that she would not like to live in one of them. If the university erects new and better dormitories Miss Boyer stated she believed she would like to live in them.

Mary Oddo, a teachers college freshman from Omaha favors dormitories, "because it would give you a chance to study." Several other girls stated that they thought dormitories would be a good place for freshmen. Dorothy Countryman pointed out that most freshmen are inexperienced and unable to make a wise choice in selecting a rooming house. "They do not know which houses are the best and consequently land in the worst one usually," she said.

Fine for Freshmen.

Wilma Wittmersche, Cedar Bluffs, a teachers college freshman favors dormitories because it would be a good place for freshmen. Lucille Poppe, Bern, Kas., an arts and science sophomore, is willing to take a chance on dormitories. "I have never lived in a dormitory," she said, "but I think I might like it." None of the girls favoring dormitories stated that the campus was crowded or that present housing facilities were insufficient to care for the present university enrollment.

Some girls stated that they were not satisfied with the conditions of their rooms and that most of the houses near the university campus were "positively shabby."

No Choice of Association.

Marie Marrow, a freshman in the school of journalism, fears that dormitories would allow students no privacy. "One wouldn't have any choice of his associates," she said. Miss Marrow pointed out that students would be deprived of the right of selecting their own company if they were compelled to live in dormitories with large numbers of other students. She said that a similar condition existed in sorority houses but that a girl selected her own sorority and had an opportunity to call at the house and get some kind of opinion of what the girls were like before she pledged. She said this privilege would not be extended to non-sorority girls if they were compelled to live in a dormitory against their own choice.

Eleanor Sammons, a junior in the college of business administration, believes that the dormitory system would not work at Nebraska because of the large and cosmopolitan student body. Deloris Deadman, Fairbury, a teachers college sophomore, and Esther Marrow believe that the dormitory system would work a hardship upon many students. "Lots of girls work for their room and board and many more students just live from hand to mouth, nip and tuck with expenses. A compulsory dormitory ruling would compel many girls to leave school," they said.

Once Enough for Her.

Nadine Clark, a teachers college junior, of Chapman, Kas., as lived in one and her experience caused her to oppose any dorm building plan at Nebraska.

line Wickman, of Farwell, a teacher college freshman and Margaret Pumroy, a teachers college freshman from Cozad, would not favor the plan of compelling students to take their meals in a dormitory.

Dorothy Bellamy, an arts and science sophomore from Scottsbluff attended the University of Southern California last year and was compelled to live in a dormitory. She stated that the system was successful as far as freshmen were concerned but that she did not favor a similar policy here because of the large and varied student body.

Wilma Hill, an arts and science junior from Sabetha, Kas., opposes dormitories because they would mean too many rules and she does not want her life to be entirely governed by rules. "Not a hot idea," she declared.

And it fugits faster all the time. We don't have to be masterminds or mathematicians to tell you that there aren't many days left until Christmas.
