Marshall, Canto of 'I Pagliacci,' Rose To Fame After Long, Diligent Study

Eleven years ago an American boy sang himself to fame before a Chicago audience in one night. That boy was Charles Marshall, tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company who will be heard in the role of "Canto" when that organization presents "I Pagliacci" at the University of Nebraska coliseum, March 17.

Marshall rose suddenly from obscurity like the country that he embodies of the musical stage; and he possesses, too, its best qualities, unsparing energy and physical strength, according to the critics.

The foundation of his triumph at home was laid abroad. He had resolved not to bring his voice back to his fellow countrymen until it satisfied himself and he had no mercy on his own faults. He trudged thru all the unromantic stretches of vocal and dramatic routine. Then when he deserved to rank among the first of living tenors, in voice, dramatic ability and intelligence, he appeared in Chicago and stepped immediately into his rightful place.

Prefers Music.
He was born in Waterville, Me. As a robust, vigorous boy, he gave music the preference over the more naturally appointed career of shoe manufacturing (his father's business), a preference that was not immediately understood in the small New England village. At twelve he was singing solos in the Episcopal choir. Then his voice changed into a strong tenor and he went first to Boston to study and finally went abroad.

He studied with the great old master, Lombardi, now dead, and with Vanucci. After he had made his debut in Italy, he toured France, Turkey, Greece and Russia with a company. In 1914 he returned to Italy, where he sang in some of the best houses and all the while he looked on this part of his experience as the final stage in his long training that was to fit him for his triumphal return to his own country.

Was an Unknown.
Chicago knew little or nothing about him when he came there in 1920 and nothing much was added to its knowledge by the advance notices of his appearance in "Othello."

The title role of Verdi's "Othello" is not a vehicle for the testing out of raw recruits. No one has sung it quite up to the mark of the Czech, Leo Slogacz, when he was with the Metropolitan and Boston companies. As there is no halfway in "Othello" between a great triumph and a complete "flop," music critics guessed that the Chicago company had made a find.

They guessed rightly. Marshall, with his famous co-artists, Rosa Raisa and Fitta Ruffo, secured such a triumph as Chicago has seldom seen.

Studies Each Role.
In studying a role, Marshall not only insists on getting the firmest grip of all the essentials of the character but is never resting until he has absolute command of every side issue in any way connected with the job in hand. He knows his foreign languages perfectly and he familiarizes himself with department addressed the Lincoln high school mathematics staff Thursday afternoon on "Building and Loan Associations." Dr. Camp has made a study of such associations in Illinois. Some of the results which he found have been published under the title, "Devices for Computing Rates Together with a Statistical Study of Building and Loan associations."

RUINED BY THE WOMAN HE LOVES!
While he toiled for her amid the thundering presses of a great city daily, his wife played at love! Then the day came for the whole world to gossip over every little morsel of his personal scandal! Would her husband's newspaper print THAT too? Would he have the nerve to wreck his own home as his sensational editorial policies had wrecked others?
The answer is dramatic! Startling, thrilling, romantic drama of a new side of life!
