Juniors important. Robert Kelly, president of the Student council, in addressing a joint meeting of the three campus political factions Thursday night stressed the importance of the juniors in the union drive. He said that the seniors are important because they will be alumni next year when the actual union building drive gets under way, but that it must be remembered that the present juniors will be seniors next year and that upon them will fall the actual work of pushing the project.

FARM ANNUAL IS PLANNED

'Farm Op Spotlight' Will Be Put Out by Students in Short Course.

If present plans are successful, the farm operator's short course students at the agricultural college will publish another edition of their newspaper in printed form within the next two weeks. Merton Kuhr of Blair, editor, and George Round, Jr., who instructed the boys in news writing are conferring with printing establishments to get their price on the sheet and will know definitely by the end of the week whether the paper will be published.

It is the plan of Round and Kuhr to publish a four page sheet in which the pictures of the basketball team, graduating class, and class officers would be reproduced. The paper would serve as an annual for the 100 farm boys who conclude their course at the college the latter part of this month.

The first issue of the farm operator's newspaper, "The Farm Op Spotlight," appeared on the agricultural college campus several weeks ago in mimeographed form. Maurice Kramer or Aurora is the managing editor of the farm boys' paper.

HILDA BURKE, NEDDA OF 'I PAGLIACCI', HAS HAD PHENOMENAL RISE AS SOPRANO.

(Continued from Page 1.) However, when she was sixteen, he announced to her she must not take piano lessons from him any more. Much as it cost him to lose his favorite pupil, he said he could no longer give her piano lessons with a clear conscience, after he had discovered it was her voice that would make her career.

Until that time, she had sung in children's choirs without realizing she might have a voice some day. She now left the old German who had been her teacher, and went to a vocal instructor. Her progress was rapid, so that before many years had passed she was winning a contest for the privilege of appearing as soloist with the Baltimore symphony, with Rosa Raisa and Charles Hackett sitting as judges. At that time Mme. Raisa predicted Miss Burke would soon be with the Chicago company.

A year later she entered contests of the National Federation of Music clubs, as Maryland's representative, and shared the first prize with one other singer. In 1928 came the contest that led directly to the fulfillment of Rosa Raisa's prophecy. This was the contest of the Julliard foundation of New York, which requested all large musical institutions to send one pupil each to take part. The five winners were to have one or two years of training in Dresden, with appearances there. Miss Burke was one of the five winners.

She had never failed in any contest she entered; and now a higher honor was in store for her. A part of the Julliard prize which she had won was an audition before Herbert M. Johnson of the Chicago Civic Opera company. She sang for him the "Pace, Pace Mio Dio" from "La Forza del Destino," with which she had succeeded before. After the audition, she was told a contract would be given her with the Chicago Civic Opera company. She immediately declined the rest of the Julliard prize.

Miss Burke made her debut in November, 1928, in the role of Aida, four other parts being filled by Americans, Coe Glade, Charles Marshall, Robert Ringling and Chase Baromeo. In addition to her Nedda in which she will be heard by University of Nebraska students, her other roles include Donna Elvira in "Don Giovanni," Elsa in "Lohengrin" and Micaela in "Carmen."

With Miss Burke on the opera program at the coliseum will be Claudia Muzio, Richard Bonelli, Antonio Cortis, Constance Eberhart, Charles Marshall, Giuseppe Cavadore, Desire Defrere and Mario Fiorella.

IOWA UNION, KNOWN AS 'HEARTHSTONE OF OLD GOLD,' IS CRADLE OF SPIRIT.

(Continued from Page 1.) sons the same year. Large social gatherings of student groups, faculty groups, and state organizations added 10,000 more to the total number who used the buildings. The building itself is a structure of beautiful white stone, overlooking the Iowa river. It is surrounded by well kept lawns. An enclosed porch, running around the structure, serves as a lounge when parties are in progress in the main hall. A soda grill, cafeteria and cafe service, and reading room provide for students' comfort.

Two Units Completed. Altho only two units of the building have been completed, unnumbered facilities are offered. The large lounge, pictured above, which is 90 by 136 feet, is used for young men to come in contact with other young men, for young women to visit with young men, for students to entertain parents, and for concerts, dramatic readings, vesper, banquets, large parties and reception rooms. It also serves as headquarters for returning alumni.

A women's lounge in the building is used for teas, receptions and group meetings. Overlooking the river is the large sun porch, used for teas and parties. The porch will accommodate 100 couples. No charge is made for its use by university organizations.

Has Religion Unit. A carefully selected list of library books covers a large variety of subjects. In addition, a good selection of magazines and newspapers is offered to students free of charge. Some of the most valuable floor space in the two units has been devoted to religious work with the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. organizations having large and complete offices.

Two private dining rooms are available for group meetings at meal time. There is no charge except for the meal. A grill is operated in addition to a cafeteria, where meals are available every day in the week. Special grill service is offered during parties. Table d'hote dinners are served on Sundays.

Committee rooms are available. They accommodate from six to thirty persons. Faculty members have rooms on the second and third floors, in charge of members of men's and women's faculty clubs. Other facilities include women's rest rooms, men's and women's coat rooms, and general meeting places. In all, some twenty activities are housed in the building. It will provide for forty-four distinct activities when completed.

Begun in 1919. Plans for the Iowa Memorial union were first discussed in 1919, and a campaign to raise $1,000,000 for a building was started that fall among alumni, students and friends of the school. Year after year a group of students went to newcomers to the university for subscriptions. The drive was carried on among alumni and friends of the university. By 1924, nearly $600,000 had been pledged, and the board of trustees let the contract for unit one during September. The unit was dedicated in 1926.

Each year students kept adding to the sum pledged. In April, 1926, the contract for the second unit was let. It was finished in March 1927. The next unit will be one to house a university theater.

Is Real Home. According to Iowa officials, the building has provided a home for the university family. In addition, it offers a pleasant environment for parents to visit sons and daughters. One of its greatest advantages, according to an official bulletin of the building, is that it provides a wholesome atmosphere where young men and women may come together, and a hearth stone for returning alumni.

The cultural influence of the building also is pointed to by university heads. This is added to by wholesome recreation. Development of community spirit, the passing on of ideals of past and present generations to future students, housing of extra curricular activities, development of students thru social contacts and improvement of social life in general on the campus are other advantages which the Iowa building has brought.

The building serves the highest interests of the university by drawing together in a common fellowship the students and faculties of the various colleges, a booklet on the building concludes.
