The announcement was made as a part of the annual honors convocation of the university, at which students of outstanding scholastic standing are honored. Address to the honored students was made by Victor Murdock, editor of the Wichita Eagle.

FINAL PLANS FOR AG COLLEGE FAIR NEAR COMPLETION

Friday and Saturday, giving the students time to prepare for the fair.

Two days of the coming week students of the college will draw on the aprons and overall's in keeping with past traditions of increasing interest and enthusiasm for the fair. The senior fair board has not designated the days as yet.

Plans are going forward for the final rally before fair sometime the fore part of the week. At that time all final preparations will be reported at the pep meeting. Corn cobs and tassels will be on hand to help increase the student enthusiasm for the thirteenth annual fair.

No definite word has been announced about the parade, it is expected that it will leave the college agriculture Saturday morning in time to pass thru the main street of Lincoln during the noon hour. Every department in the college of agriculture will be on display in the 50 motor unit parade.

Girls in the home economics department will pick their goddess of agriculture the first two days of this week, Monday and Tuesday. Twenty-three senior girls are eligible for the honor. The girls will vote on seven and the highest will be the goddess. The other high six will be the attendants.

To Construct Boat. This year the goddess of agriculture will ride on a float depicting a boat. Attendants for the goddess will be fake rowers. The float will be more novel than in previous years. Ruth White was the goddess of agriculture last year.

The 1931 Goddess of Agriculture will be presented at the annual pre fair dance given in the student activities building by the senior fair board on Friday night. She will probably be presented in a novel fashion.

The senior fair board is urging committee members to make their final preparations for the fair as soon as possible. They report, however, that the work is as far along as at a corresponding time in former years.

Police Provided. Herb Yost, chairman of the police committee, announced Saturday night that he is making preparations for deputizing his policemen for Farmer's fair. This has been the usual procedure in former years to give fair patrons real police protection. Yost will probably have his assistants sworn in before Friday, he said last evening.

Old fashioned quilting days are here, according to Mabel Bignell, head of the quilt show. She is inviting women to bring their

Job of Placing Teachers in State Has Never Been as Difficult as at Present, Director Moritz Declares

Fewer positions, increased competition, and lower salaries confront prospective teachers and make the task of placing them the most difficult ever experienced by R. D. Moritz, director of the University of Nebraska's bureau of educational service which finds positions for more than 500 teachers college students and alumni annually.

"I do not recall that Nebraska has ever been confronted by such a condition as now exists," Mr. Moritz declared. "The output of teachers this year is about the same as usual, but the opportunity for placing these teachers new in the profession has been perceptibly diminished as a result of economic conditions."

Mr. Moritz finds three chief contributory causes. First, school boards, to cut school taxes, must either reduce salaries of their present teaching staff or reduce the number of teachers. Many superintendents are combining several grades or subjects, increasing the teaching load, and eliminating one or more of their present staff, which adds to the competition for jobs.

Second, many married women who formerly were teachers returning to teaching because their husbands are out of employment or because they have had their income reduced. These women are willing to teach for less than the usual amount and find positions easy to secure.

Third, a large percent of the annual turnover in teaching comes thru women who leave the profession to get married. The economic depression of the past year has necessitated many to postpone marriage.

The demand for teachers who are qualified in three or four subjects remains, especially if these subjects include practical or commercial arts, home economics, athletics, normal training or music. The greatest oversupply of teachers is in English, languages, and history, Mr. Moritz declares.
