Many School Classes Pay Visits To Features At Agricultural College

By GEORGE ROUND.

"Oh teacher, look at that cute little calfy."

"Miss Smith, Miss Smith, did you see that curly tailed pig and that great big horse?"

"There goes my cow, that big spotted thing. Boy, I'll bet she gives a pint of milk every day."

Such is the usual run of conversation among grade school students visiting the college of agriculture campus during these spring months. High school graduating classes and other groups make up similar groups that are continually visiting the campus. In all there will have been close to 1,000 boys and girls visit the college by the time school is out.

Thomas in Charge.

J. L. Thomas, who is in charge of routing and reports for the agricultural extension service, usually finds time to take the kiddies and boys and girls around the campus. If they have plenty of time he takes them to all of the major departments.

Usually the groups come overland either by bus or auto. Thomas likes to have them arrive just before noon so they may eat their lunch in the college cafeteria. Then he takes them to the agricultural engineering department where they are shown the wood working division, the forge and the blacksmith department.

In addition they are shown the tractors and they learn how to tractor tests are completed. The big strong country boy usually gets the "biggest kick out of the agricultural engineering department."

View Horses.

From the visitors are usually taken to the horse barns. Right now the twin colts of Crescent Belle's are receiving the most attention. Then there are the older horses and the show animals. Thomas says the youngsters enjoy seeing the horses more than any other animals on the campus. They are especially interesting to the Omaha school children who visit the campus.

The visitors are next taken to the beef barns. There they see the young calves that are being fitted for showing next fall. Right now the rest of the cattle are at the agronomy farm which is located east of University Place.

Visit Dairy Barns. If the group is lucky enough to get to the dairy barn early, they see a magnificent herd of purebred dairy cows being milked by mechanical milkers. Some of the boys and girls usually have never seen a milk cow and are thrilled at Dean Ferguson, after giving a resume of Dr. Chatburn's work and achievements since coming here thirty-seven years ago, concluded: "Dr. Chatburn has set an example that we, who are his colleagues, may well emulate. Plans for Traditional Law Senior Affair Near Completion.

The committee has planned a menu amply fit for such an occasion. A beef will be barbecued and all the trimmings of an Epicurian dinner will be included in the repast. Many diversions including a pie eating contest and a fat man's race will be perpetrated. Ball players or horse shoe artists will be able to show their stuff. The scandal will be portrayed in the "Law Bull" but the editors refuse to disclose themselves as well as the objects of their writings.

JAYHAWKERS EKE OUT WIN IN MEET

Nebraska Stages Classic Rally in Closing Events of Day But Kansas Cinder Stars Maintain Lead To Take First; Score 63 1-2 Points.

TOMSON LEAPS 25 FEET 6 1-4 TO BEAT RECORD

Three Other Records Made by Ehrlich of K-Aggies in High Jump; Dawson of Oklahoma in Mile; Coffman of Kansas in Pole Vault.

BY LEONARD CONKLIN.

Gripping, dogged, heartbreaking races and phenomenal leaps in the broad jump, high jump and pole vault drew howls of pleasure from 2,000 lusty Big Six track fans in Memorial stadium yesterday.

Kansas university triumphed for the second time in succession in this Big Six outdoor festival held in Lincoln, turning back a persistent Cornhusker rally so that the final scores stood: Kansas, 63 1/2; Nebraska, 57; Iowa, 39 1/2; Oklahoma, 37 1/2; Kansas Aggies, 29 1/2, and Missouri, 7.

In the 220-yard low hurdles Bernard Gridley of Kansas scampered well ahead of the field to dash across the finish in the extraordinary time of 25 flat which ties the existing world record. A tail wind, however, cheats Gridley of recognition in this noteworthy performance. Flick, Jayhawk team-mate of Gridley's was second.

Four Big Six records were shattered. Cobe Tomson tossed his well knit body far out from the broad jump board and came down 25 feet 6 1/4 inches out in the pit to take first in that event. A medium breeze prevented recognition of this feat as a new record. The world record in the broadjump is 26 feet and 1 inch by Cator of Haiti.

Don Gray, a team mate of Tomson's, cleared 24 feet 2 3/4 inches in the broad jump Friday in the preliminaries to break Cobe Tomson's 1930 record. This mark will stand. Gray also had a jump of 25 feet 1/4 inch yesterday.

Captain Milton Ehrlich of Kansas Aggies, slender blond lad, shot himself into the air 6 feet 3/4 and above his head plenty to raise the

Gass Asks Edison Type Of Question On Books; Students' Answers Vary

"If you knew that you were to be marooned on a desert island for years, and you had your choice of ten books to take with you, which books would you select?" This was the question that was asked recently by Prof. Sherlock Bronson Gass of two English 4 classes.

The answers were many and varied. The students named 169 books, all in all. The most popular book was the Bible which forty-four out of forty-eight students named. Shakespeare's complete works came in a close second with forty-three votes. Whether students named these two books because they would really enjoy having them along on a desert island trip, or whether they were named because it appeared to be the thing to do is a debatable matter. However, since the books chosen would probably have to be read and re-read in all the years spent on the island, perhaps many students saw a splendid opportunity of becoming more familiar with these two books.

Favor "Les Miserables." Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" was the third most popular book, polling twenty-one votes. Webster's Collegiate dictionary was chosen by sixteen people, and the unabridged edition by one person. This sounds like an unfair advantage though. But anyway, the unabridged edition would probably sink the raft. Dante's "Divine Comedy," Wells' "Outline of History," and Emerson's Essays tied for fifth place, each being selected by eleven students.

"Pilgrim's Progress," Poe's short stories and poems, Plato's "Dialogues," Boswell's "Life of Johnson," Darwin's "Origin of Species," "Don Quixote," and Duran's "Story of Philosophy" proved to be among the most frequently chosen books.
