names of towns from which each member of the Greek lodge is from.

The feature section which was made larger now consists of 24 pages with three full pictorial views.

Approve Cover.
The cover of the Cornhusker has come in for its share of approval. It is an extremely striking one, in the colors of black and gold, upon which are placed the same characters which fulfilled the theme; the student and the musketeer. It is of imitation leather.

Another beautiful section of the book is its scenic one. This section, in the front part of the book, was finished in the Genthner process which produces a rich painted effect. The many campus scenes come in for this part. The administration walk, library, Ivy day playground, military haunts, engineer's kingdom, and no man's land are featured, in this unique finish.

Following last year's innovation, this year's book contains a chronological pictorial section. The "march of events" during the school year is pictorially presented beginning with football rallies, etc., and ending up with outstanding campus events of the latter part of the year.

The book consists of individual pictures of the juniors and seniors, both social and professional fraternities and sororities, religious and business organizations, the various councils, faculty, publication staffs, athletic teams and accomplishments, the many committees that took a prominent place in school activities, R. O. T. C. companies, the many military organizations, pep clubs, and all other features that have taken a prominent and regular part in the record of students, activities, and organizations.

The railroad was offering special excursion rates to Seward for Memorial day. The R. O. T. C. units were encamped there, and arrangements were being made for a band concert to be given in the evening before the last train left.

The seniors celebrated Ivy day in a drizzling rain, and the decorations were hastily removed from the grounds to the gymnasium. There the Ivy day oration was given, and after the planting of the ivy in the rain, the senior class president handed over the trowel to the junior president, with a special request that he use his in-fluence to see that Ivy Day be observed the next year. Prominent members of the class were selected as recipients of gifts particularly appropriate to their virtues and failings: a mirror to the most beautiful girl, a miniature harp to one outstanding in musical ability, a shaving mug to a class officer, and a spade to one noted for his industry. Games and dancing fol-lowed the program.

A Japanese jinrikisha, the prop-erty of William J. Bryan, was used as a coach in the Ivy day proces-sion. The vehicle, in which the May queen was carried to the seat of honor near the May pole, was presented to Mr. Bryan when he stopped in Japan on his trip around the world.

Authorities of the state peni-tentiary complained that students going on picnics caused a great amount of trouble. The officials declared that every time the pic-nickers passed the pen, they started to sing, and it started the prisoners to yelling and howling until the whole house was stirred up, and it sometimes took half an hour to quiet them down.
