

NEW DIVISION MADE AT WESTERN SCHOOL

University of Washington Places Administration Under Two Heads.

The adoption of a plan whereby the instructional side of the university would be divorced from the business side has been announced by the board of regents of the University of Washington at Seattle and word received this week here at the university yesterday. With such business terms as business manager and vice president, the university has reorganized on a plan which has attracted attention at other educational institutions.

The plan is explained in the following news item which appeared in the University of Washington Journal:

A basic plan on which the university will operate for many years to come—that was President M. Lyle Spencer's characterization yesterday, following his return from Hawaii, of the creation of a business managership by the board of regents the day of his departure.

As business manager of the university, Neal W. Winter, who went into office July 1, will have charge of the physical and financial affairs of the university while David Thomson, under his new title of vice-president, will have charge of educational affairs, Dr. Spencer said.

"It is a complete reorganization which will result in the president's office coming into contact with the affairs of the university through the heads of the two divisions rather than through all the small units as was the practice hitherto," he said.

Under this arrangement some of the executive work of the business of the university will be delegated to the business manager and the vice president, both responsible to the president's office, leaving the president more time free for other duties, according to Dr. Spencer. "This plan is designed to be in effect long after I have gone and after the next president has gone," he said.

Dr. Spencer left June 18 for Hawaii on the naval cadet cruise aboard the U. S. S. Oklahoma, and returned Monday. Prof. Leslie J. Ayer, acting dean of the law school; Prof. J. Grattan O'Bryan of the law school, and Earl Campbell, A. S. U. W. graduate manager, also were on the cruise.

TWO FROM LOUP COUNTY.

COUNTY UNIT PLAN KEYNOTES SESSION

(Continued from Page 1.) meetings opened and a study of their solutions will occupy most of the time during the remainder of the institute:

Questions Considered.

How to persuade the counties to take advantage of the new county unit plan since the law is merely permissive in effect. How to be sure that the right kind of men and women are appointed as county board members. What should be the training of the county social worker? What resources are there in the state to utilize for county development? How does the rural problem differ from the city problem? What can the social worker do with problems whose solutions requires facilities which are not immediately available?

Classes are meeting from 10 to 12 o'clock each morning and from 8 to 9 o'clock in the evening.

Assisting Miss Johnson in the work of directing the institute is Dr. Hattie Plum Williams, professor of sociology at the University of Nebraska, who was in charge of registrations.

the student executive committee, of which he is general chairman, says, "The students in this summer session have been very cooperative in every way in aiding us to make tea parties and picnics a success. This is shown by the large number of students who have attended. On the average we have had between 450 and 500 at each party which is a large increase over last year's affairs."

"Doubts as to whether the students wanted the dances and parties each week, as well as the golf and horseshoe tournaments and baseball games, were soon turned into the conviction that they were willing to cooperate to the fullest extent in putting across any programs. We wish to thank the students for their aid in every way. Whenever aid was needed those willing to help far outshaded the number needed for the work."

Bus Routes.

There are three bus routes to Agricultural college. They are: Havelock, east on O street from Ninth to Thirty-third; north on Thirty-third to Vine and east on Vine to Thirty-fifth; north on Thirty-fifth street and Idylwild Drive to entrance to Agricultural college. Busses leave Ninth and P every thirty minutes, at ten minutes of and twenty minutes after the hour.

The University Place line can be boarded anywhere on O street from Ninth to Eleventh; on Eleventh to R; east on R to Twenty-seventh; north on Twenty-seventh to Vine; east on Vine street to Thirty-third where it overlaps with the Havelock line and runs out east to Thirty-fifth and north on Thirty-fifth and Idylwild drive to entrance to Agricultural college. University Place busses leave Ninth and P every thirty minutes at five minutes after and twenty-five minutes of each hour all day and evening.

The third means of getting to the location of the party is by way of the Agricultural college line. Busses may be taken anywhere on Fourteenth from Arapahoe street north to J and on Thirteenth street as far north as R street; on R to Fourteenth; north on Fourteenth to Vine; east on Vine to Twenty-second; north on Twenty-second to Holdrege, and east on oHldrege to Idylwild Drive and the entrance to the Agricultural college. Busses leave Thirteenth and O streets going to Agricultural college every twelve minutes until 9 o'clock and then every fifteen minutes, beginning on the hour. They also leave Fourteenth and Arapahoe nine, thirty-three and fifty-seven minutes past each od hour and twenty-one and forty-five minutes past each hour until 8:45 p. m. and then every thirty minutes until 11:15 p. m.

AFTERNOON CLASSES MAY BE ELIMINATED; ASK STUDENT OPINION

rollment exceeded that of any previous year, altho the noon hour was considered the most unfavorable of any on the schedule. Later on the class voted as to what period they would prefer the class. Conflicts with other morning classes made it impossible for the majority to take the work at any other time in the morning under the present plan.

Then came the proposal that by changing the beginning of the class period to the half-hour instead of the hour the difficulty of attending noon meetings or group luncheons would be lessened as the last class for the day would be dismissed at 12:30.

Such a change does not mean that the time for all classes would necessarily be advanced thirty minutes, officials pointed out. Afternoon classes might be shifted to the first period and some of the classes now meeting at 7 might meet at 7:30 instead of 6:30. Whatever shift might be necessary in changing the classes so that they would begin at the half-hour mark would be worked out if the plan met student approval.

"The summer school officials would be glad to hear of the student reaction to these suggestion," Professor Moritz declared. He pointed out that no change was as yet being considered, but that the administration would be willing to revise the program for 1932 should the students so desire it.

SCRIBNER'S ANNOUNCE NEW STORY CONTEST

The August number of Scribner's, is to continue to offer a market for the long story, a form of writing which had long been neglected. The quality of the work in the first contest and the interest aroused in readers by it has prompted the second competition.

Examples of earlier works of this nature are Edith Wharton's "Ethan Frome" which originally appeared in Scribner's Magazine), Conrad's "Youth," De Maupassant's "Boule de Suif," Katherine Mansfield's "Prelude" and Willa Cather's "A Lost Lady." Many continental writers have done their best work in this field, such as Arthur Schnitzler, Andre Maurois, Stefan Zweig. Not only has the lack of opportunity to publish this type of writing been a matter of financial concern to American writers but it has acted as a severe artistic handicap to many who function best in works of this length.

Scribner's magazine, as in the last contest, will purchase all stories of the required length which meet with its approval. From these the prize winner will be selected. The prize winner will be offered book publication by Charles Scribner's Sons, on royalty terms acceptable to the author. Manuscripts will be read as promptly as possible and stories either be purchased or returned at once.
