ENGINEERS BECOME MEN OF THE WORLD ON CONVENTION TRIP; VISIT GOTHAM, SEE FOLLIES, GO FOR ELEVATOR RIDE

The convention started Thursday morning. There were fifty-five delegates at the conference representing twenty-two schools. Most of the members were from eastern schools, the Nebraska men said. The convention spent most of its time discussing ways of improving engineering college magazines. That noon the convention had lunch at the Student Activities building.

"We were very favorably impressed by the Student Union building at Penn State," the Blue Print representatives said. "The building contained a restaurant for the students and faculty, and lounge, game rooms, activities offices and study rooms, and a library."

That night the members of the conference were entertained at a smoker at the Kappa Sigma house. Entertainment was furnished by the delegates, and Larry O'Connell, head football coach at that institution, spoke.

The convention experienced quite a bit of excitement Friday afternoon, the representatives of Massachusetts Institute of Technology had proposed several changes in the constitution of the organization. The discussion became rather heated, but nothing was done about the proposals. That night a banquet was given by the society. After the dinner, the convention attended a party at the Nittany Lion Inn, a hotel in the mountains.

Fun Limited. "The students at Penn State are not allowed to have cars," Bill Johnston, one of the Nebraska delegates to the convention, said. "So all dating couples have to walk. There are no street cars or taxicabs in the town, and the only form of entertainment outside of the one theater is the all univer-

'ST. CLAUDIA' GIVEN AT HUMBOLT CHURCH Wesley Players Present Religious Drama Of Christ.

"St. Claudia" was presented by alumni of the local chapter of Wesley Players (national religious dramatic organization) at Humboldt last night, and will be given again at Beatrice on November 7. Local Methodist churches are sponsoring the presentations.

Carolyn Cooper, Milford, and Russell Lindskog, Lincoln, both of the class of 1931, again are taking the leading parts of Claudia Procula and Pontius Pilate, her husband, respectively. Miss Cooper and Lindskog took these parts more than fifteen times last year at showings thruout the state.

Irene Fee, '30, Lincoln, is portraying the parts of Mary of Magdala and Petronia while Jennie Lind, also of Lincoln and the class of 1930, is playing Miriam and Beulah. Miss Fee has been assistant director of the Wesley Players since her graduation and is also national vice president of the group.

Others in the cast include Irving Walker as Sargius; George Schmidt as Marcus and Bartimeus; Harold Bates playing Simon while Ray Abernathy portrays Eliezer. Lloyd Mitchell will handle the part of Simeon and Lazarus will be played by Ruben Hecht. Judas Iscariot, the betrayer of Christ, is played by Russell Lindskog.

Deals with Pilate. The plot of "St. Claudia" deals with the home life of Pontius Pilate at the time he is passing judgment on the case of Jesus Christ. He sees nothing wrong with what Jesus has done and attempts to pacify the crowds who seek Christ's life. He will be charged with misconduct of office by the Emperor of Rome unless he settles the situation without damage to the Roman interests. He is also faced with the position of crucifying an innocent man.

The play gives in detail how Pontius Pilate attempts to relieve the situation by giving the crowd the choice of the freedom of Barabaras, the murderer and thief, or that of Christ. The throng, influenced by the Jewish leaders, asks for Barabaras' freedom.

J. Alan Klein, who is one of the cartoonists of the Micky Mouse screen comics, contributed a cartoon. Marcelyn Lichty, who is connected with the Chicago Tribune art department, sent several drawings for the Celebrity number. Oz Black and Vic Scherzinger who are on the Nebraska State Journal art staff likewise contributed drawings. As well as the contributions of the former Nebraska students exchanges were printed from the leading humor magazines in the country. The Awgwan exchanges with sixty such publications. Kinkead reported that certain organizations had announced their intentions of chartering buses for these trips. The council decided that such organizations may charter buses but they should announce their intention of doing so to the council so that it may help them. Walter Huber, chairman of the budget committee, presented his proposed budget to the council, and it was voted to adopt it.
