Let's Broaden the Scope of Our Vision.

In connection with peace week, the university organization known as World Forum presents at its luncheon this noon Dr. George A. Coe, nationally known author and educator, who will speak on the subject "Is Disarmament Visionary?"

Disarmament is at present a topic of world-wide interest, and one upon which a good deal of discussion is being manifested. For the present leaders, the topic is but one of discussion and agitation; for the next generation of leaders, it may grow into a question upon which leaders will be compelled to act rather than express their opinions.

Dr. Coe is considered by many to be one of the most able men in the field of education, according to Dr. Patterson's statement in the Daily Nebraskan yesterday. Undoubtedly, the content of his remarks will be characterized by the wealth of ideas which they advance.

The disarmament agitation in Lincoln will find expression in the statewide conference to be held here Nov. 21 and 22, and Dr. Coe's series of addresses, of which his forum lecture will be the fourth, is given as a precursor of the convention.

Whatever may be a person's attitude on the subject of disarmament, he cannot have yet formulated an opinion impervious to opposition attacks for the reason that as yet no solution in either direction has been advanced which is absolutely invulnerable. The esteem in which the opinion of any man is held is due largely to his impartiality in assimilating various facts that go to make up his breadth of knowledge. No matter how adamant a man may be concerning a certain solution of a problem in his own mind, the more knowledge he may have of the opposition's arguments, the more stabilized will be his refutations, and the more respected will be his position.

It will be well worth the time of any student or faculty member to hear the remarks of Dr. Coe sometime while he is in Lincoln, and the opportunity afforded this noon is indeed convenient.

A Hearty Welcome, Dads.

With this edition of The Nebraskan comes the announcement of Dad's day. This is an annual affair designed to bind fathers more closely to their sons and daughters. Dads come down to look over the university, to see how their sons and daughters are being educated and how well they are getting along. It is well that a special day be set aside for the purpose of interesting dads, especially the dads of new students, more deeply in what happens to son and daughter after entering the university.

Some will come here for their first Dad's day. They will be anxious to know of the many things that are being done at the university, because they now have a vital interest in it. So the new students are urged to take special pains in inviting their dads to attend the festivities.

Many dads will remember experiences of previous Dad's days—the enjoyable visit with son or daughter, the banquet, the football game, and the general display of Cornhusker hospitality. Therefore old students are reminded to invite their dads.

The administration is particularly anxious to have every dad down here for this day. It feels that this is the best opportunity that could be had for giving the dads a better understanding of the workings and purposes of the university, and the actual living conditions of their sons and daughters.

A banquet at the chamber of commerce at noon will be held for the dads, at which the honored guests will be entertained by several short talks, and also given a chance to mingle with each other. In the afternoon Nebraska encounters Iowa university on the gridiron. This will be an exciting battle and a wholesome entertainment.

Fraternities and sororities will make a special effort to honor the dads. Banquets and other forms of entertainment will be supplied for the purpose of making the dads feel at home so that they will be more inclined to visit as often as possible.

It is the aim of the entire university, administration, faculty, students, and organizations, to give the dads a hearty welcome, to make them feel as though they are really wanted here, because it means a great deal to the students to be in closer touch with that steady guiding influence that has led them so far in their life's journey. With this in mind The Nebraskan extends a cordial invitation to every dad to take part in the Dad's day festivities.

A report from Colorado university indicates that freshmen do not object to being tossed into an icy lake for not wearing green caps, but they do object to being ducked in alphabetical order. Just a technical point that ought to be straightened out.

Kosmet Klub vs. Law College.

TO THE EDITOR:

Kosmet Klub has taken a definite stand, and law college has taken a definite stand. The stands have locked horns, so to speak, and now the student council takes a hand in the matter.

There are many students in sympathy with the Laws, and quite as many in sympathy with Kosmet Klub. There are as many points for as against.

For years past, whenever a law student has run for Nebraska Sweetheart, the Laws have gone solid and elected her. It is a tradition, an established precedent. Law college is to be congratulated on the fact that it can boast of such co-operation and organization. What other college on the campus may say the same?

On the other hand, Kosmet Klub feels, rightly perhaps, that there should be some honor for the intermediates, the junior and sophomore girls. They feel that the Sweetheart should be a representative of the women students on the campus—students from all colleges, rather than one. It is to be a university affair, not college. They passed a ruling to this end, and are men enough to stick to it.

Competition is the spice of life, elections are the scenes of excitement, speculation, and wonder. These issues, crises, or what have you, only serve to draw more attention to the election, arouse more interest, get more men out to the polls. No one really cares how it turns out, it's the splurge, the big writeups, the publicity and notoriety that count. This conflagration gives the ex-queen and law candidate much publicity. Kosmet Klub will shine as taking its stand, and keeping it.

Kosmet Klub versus Law College! Big news today—history tomorrow. Oh, well.....

Mrs. Green Tells Vespers Of Responsibilities, Opportunities.

Pointing out that it means to the young women of the university to be members of Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Roy Green, member of the Y. W. C. A. advisory board, addressed a large group of college girls at Vespers services last evening.

"There are two things, opportunity and responsibility," that mean a great deal to every girl, said Mrs. Green. "Both of these are purposes of Y. W. C. A."

She went on to say that one is given opportunity for fellowship, friendship, inspiration, knowledge, and life service through interest in this work. The responsibility is three-fold, she said, including the necessity of not only giving financial aid but of giving oneself, and developing oneself spiritually.

Mrs. Green is a speaker and magazine writer of considerable fame, and is a graduate of the University of Nebraska. The leader of the evening services was Evelyn O'Connor, research chairman, and Dorothy Jensen directed the Vespers choir which presented special music.

Keeping Up With the Time.

One of the officials of the university has stated that the University of Nebraska is the first school of its kind to be equipped with modern electric clocks. That seems to be a simple statement but when one stops to realize that no university has yet installed this system of time keeping, as long as it has been popularly known, it is astounding. A school the size of this institution runs to a great extent on time. By that is meant correct time in all buildings is essential to harmony between the various departments and buildings for if students arrive at a class late because the clock in another building was slow, there will be friction and misunderstanding on the part of professors.

There are many students in school today who have received a calling down for coming to class late when it was the school clocks that were at fault. This installation of synchronized clocks is a great step in making it easier for the student to make classes on time. It eliminates all the worry about what time a certain clock will have. In the last few years at times there has been but three or four minutes for a person to get from one building to another before class was called. This is over now as each clock on the campus will have exactly the same time as any other clock.

In this, at least, Nebraska will have taken a stride forward in being up-to-date. The students seem to have a number of quarrels with the administration at times, but when the administration does something for the benefit of all concerned it is appreciated very much.

Maybe Will Rogers isn't so smart after all. An eight-year-old learned all of those lariat tricks in a week, and then won a roping contest.

A course in cold prevention is given at Columbia university. Managers of fraternity and rooming houses ought to take this course just before winter sets in.

Student Health.

TO THE EDITOR:

The University of Nebraska has a physician to render medical service to students for practically no cost to the students. This physician has his office in Pharmacy hall.

This is a move on the part of university authorities to help students keep in good health so they will not be thus handicapped in their studies. A person cannot do his school work justice while in pain or while ill.

Many students cannot afford the fees of city physicians, yet they do not come to the university physician. His practice deals with but a limited number of students. What effective method can be used to remind students of this service?

Each semester the students pay one dollar as a medical fee. This fee entitles them to the doctor's care. Still some students who are handicapped with colds, headaches and like illnesses never go near this doctor.

It is evident the students have forgotten the existence of this doctor or at registration time they did not realize the purpose of this dollar. The health department sends a letter to every student each semester telling him of the service. This serves to stimulate the doctor's practice.

Students with bad colds are dangerous people. Coughing and sneezing in the classroom endangers the health of every person in the class. Every case of a cold in all its forms should be treated. If students were reminded of this doctor, they would go to him more often. A notice or story in The Daily Nebraskan every two weeks and permanent placards will accomplish this end.
