Collegians Face Problem as Report Finds Frosh Smarter Than Seniors

Upperclassmen in colleges and universities throughout the country this week were wondering just what they will have to show for their education in the face of the recent Carnegie report purporting to prove that the average freshman possesses knowledge equivalent to or above that of a senior.

The report, prepared by Dr. Henry Smith Pritchett for the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, and based upon examinations administered to 10,000 college students in various parts of Pennsylvania, blames the asserted failure of the American educational system to educate on a lack of co-ordination of the specific items of knowledge.

Dr. Pritchett's conclusions have caused a storm of discussion, and, in a large number of cases, animated protest in higher educational institutions all over the United States. This is reflected in student editorials, which are inclined to take only half seriously the comparison between freshmen and seniors.

The Indiana Daily Student, however, admits that "such accusations are interesting" and comments favorably upon the new tendency to excuse students from required courses when they successfully pass examinations.

The Chronicle of Duke university goes further, and aims a blow at the entire system of compulsory courses, an essential part of what Dr. Pritchett termed the "credit coinage" play of college education.

Though The Chronicle disagrees "emphatically" with the conclusion that "the average undergraduate has reached the peak of his knowledge by the end of his freshman year," the editor is of the opinion that "the sooner students may choose their own subjects for study instead of laboring with subjects in which they have no interest and which have no interest for them, all the more soon such accusations that the college educational system is falling will cease."

On the other hand, many educators, as well as student leaders, were inclined to believe that Dr. Pritchett had perhaps interpreted his examination results too broadly, since he apparently based his conclusions upon the relative knowledge of undergraduates.

Whether, in truth, the educator had shown a tendency to confuse a definition of "knowledge," as opposed to "intelligence," was a question much in debate. It might be, it was pointed out, that the American system did not fall quite so short of its goal in seeking to educate individuals in the art of "knowing how" and in the achievement of a "broader understanding," rather than an accumulation of word definitions and unrelated data.

Guests of honor at the banquet were Mr. William Gold, Lincoln business man and donor of the gold keys and Dr. Mrs. W. G. Langworthy Taylor. Dr. Taylor is professor emeritus of economics and formerly was head of the department.

"The banquet was a great success," Keith Lightner, president of the Bizad executive board, stated, "and I hope that future banquets will be just as successful as this one was." Members of the Bizad board were sponsors of the banquet.

AMERICA MUST POINT WAY FOR DISARMING

Forum Speaker Says United States Should Lead World Move.

"Disarmament is not a new thing," declared Dr. Geo. A. Coe, nationally known author and educator in opening his address on "Is Disarmament Visionary" at the World Forum meeting Wednesday noon. "Over one hundred years ago, the American-Canadian boarder was lined with forts, and over one hundred naval vessels were kept in the Great Lakes." Dr. Coe then pointed out how a disarmament conference at that time did away with this war paraphernalia and that the agreement reached at that time has kept both nations secure ever since.

Dr. Coe stated that there are very urgent reasons for accomplishing something in the forthcoming disarmament conference. If things remain as serious as they are now he feels that a war in a few years is inevitable. He also said that the United States will necessarily be drawn into it. "Another war will result," Dr. Coe stated, "in the economic and cultural exhaustion of the world."

Dr. Coe gave a graphic picture of how armaments in our country create fear and hate in other countries. He explained that after the war the Japanese wondered, "Why is United States putting military training in their universities? To fight whom? To fight Japan?" Dr. Coe pointed out that now Japan has military training in their schools.

"The United States is the key nation with regard to genuine disarmament," continued Dr. Coe, "for economic power can turn into moral power." Dr. Coe said that the United States must be willing to make economic sacrifices in order to get true disarmament.

Dr. Coe explained that if the nations should disarm, there should be a "police force" in each country to take care of troubles within the countries and possibly an international navy for the high seas.

In order to have the American delegates to the conference determined to secure genuine disarmament based on the principals of the Kellogg Pact, Dr. Coe urged that groups and individuals "show" President Hoover with letters expressing their desires for disarmament.
