NEBRASKA GRIDSTERS HONORED AT BANQUET

University Club Plays Host To Players and Coaches Tuesday Night.

Nebraska varsity football players and coaches were guests of honor Tuesday night at the annual gridiron banquet given by the Lincoln University club at the Stuart building. About 125 attended the dinner for which Wally Marrow's orchestra played.

Guests of honor at the affair in addition to the team and the athletic staff were Chancellor Edgar A. Burnett and Fred T. Dawson, the latter a former Nebraska coach during the years 1921-24. He is now head coach at the University of Virginia.

Highlights of the banquet included the presentation of a plaque emblematic of the Big Six football championship to Everett Kreizinger, representing the team. The plaque will be placed in the "N" club trophy room.

Bible Honored. Coach Dana X. Bible was the recipient of an autographed football on which were written the names of the 1931 squad.

The guests were welcomed by C. B. Towle, president of the club, who introduced Henry F. Schulte, Nebraska track coach, as master of ceremonies. During the meal, several members of the team were presented with gifts of the humorous variety, designed to be of great benefit to them.

The dinner courses were interspersed with four tap dances by Wally Marrow and his troupe and a number of songs from Harriet Cruise Kemmer, assisted by Harold Turner.

Mrs. Kemmer delighted the group when she directed two of her selections to Lawrence Ely, who, not in the least abashed, rose to his feet and sang with her.

Dawson Responds. Following the dinner, Schulte called upon Mr. Dawson, who responded with a humorous incident that occurred in Chicago between himself and the late Knute Rockne.

Each gridster received a present from the University club in appreciation of the team's record this season. Many of the gifts were ties and mufflers.

Coach Bible was then presented with the autographed football, and in accepting he expressed his appreciation and gratitude for the way in which the team had responded this year, and for the support given their efforts by the people of the state.

Bible said in conclusion that he wished to answer charges made against football, especially such things as injuries, overemphasis and commercialism. He asserted that football was responsible for fewer injuries and deaths than such sports as swimming and golf.

"The American boy needs a good, rugged sport like football. You can't ask any man on the team whether he does not think football has been good for him, mentally as well as physically," he declared.

BURNETT SEEKS TO CREATE FOUNDATION

Chancellor Discusses Plans Before Rotary Club Monday.

Establishment by school officials of a "foundation which will receive money and administer it" is planned, Chancellor E. A. Burnett told Rotary club members in a speech Monday.

According to the suggestion outlined by the Chancellor and Prof. Robert P. Crawford legislative appropriations which amount only to "bread and butter" would be supplemented by gifts to the school from wealthy men of this and other states.

Difficulties of administrative officials in making the university "distinctive" were explained. The legislature, Burnett said, will appropriate sufficient money to hire a "town man" but fails to make necessary allowances "when we have to go out into the market for teachers whose salary demands necessarily rise high."

Gifts to other American educational institutions in the past few years were cited by Professor Crawford, who remarked that it "seems that the University of Nebraska is hardly getting its share."

An alumni loyalty fund, he suggested, might stimulate donations, the lack of which has been "largely a matter of neglect."
