ATITUDE OF FOUR COLLEGE EDITORS OF EASTERN UNIVERSITIES GIVEN ON FREEDOM OF THE COLLEGIATE PRESS.

Editorial honesty necessitates factual accuracy, but editors may be as critical in their editorial expressions as they please.

The paper does not, of course, indicate the official viewpoint, and on occasion its opinions have admittedly differed from those of the majority of undergraduates.

Important as football, fraternities, student councils, riots and other undergraduate affairs may seem, the college paper is fundamentally concerned with less obvious but more significant things.

The case of Reed Harris brings up many of the fundamental points of college journalism. It appears that Harris lacked tact and exercised faulty judgment in some cases at least.

By BENTON H. GRANT, Chairman, Yale Daily News. Since college papers are the most powerful, and in most cases, the chief mediums thru which undergraduate opinion can be expressed, their duties and responsibilities are of great importance.

By CHARLES S. SNYDER, Editor-in-Chief, The Pennsylvaniaian. The editor of any progressive college paper has an opportunity to render his university a unique service if he will only take advantage of it.

In order to present a majority opinion, the editor must be always accessible and must be willing to seek worthwhile advice before adopting any new policy.

The student editor's most important function concerns his dealings with the administration and his method of criticism of their faults. Certainly he cannot be sincere in his job and at the same time omit all criticism of men who naturally are prone to mistakes in dealing with their own college world.

'JINGLE BELLES' STARTS LINCOLN SHOW MONDAY

The scene of the play is the Barry summer home on a bluff overlooking the Missouri river near Nebraska City on Goose Hill road. The first act occurs in the living room at 9:30 in the evening of Dec. 30, 1931. The second act is in the same room Jan. 3, 1932. The whole party is snow bound.

Mrs. Judith Barry, played by Herbert Yenne, is a middle aged widow with a modern complex and is the mother of Helen and David, students in the University of Nebraska. Helen is played by Pat McDonald, one of the characters in last year's "High And Dry."

Russel, Mottel, who had a lead in last year's show, is Tommy Randall. Lee Young cuts capers as the villain, Jerry Lambert. Byron Bailey as Mary Lou, the girl friend of David, Neil McFarland, as Jane, a free-lance in the love-making and Roger Wilkerson as Russell, a piano playing collegian, are the other principal players.

Art Wolf and Roger Wilkerson as Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael, housekeepers of the Barry summer home are the other major characters.

The plot of the show is largely woven around the caprices and love affairs of Jerry Lambert, the passionate villain. Jerry makes love to all of the women in the cast. Mrs. Barry is wise to the ways of Jerry so she takes steps to foil the evil designs of Mr. Lambert, the philandering bachelor.

Mrs. Barry had been the victim of a previous love affair of Jerry and when her daughter Helen brings him home with the other guests the mother is placed on her guard.

Tommy Randall, the fiance of Helen, is discarded by the female lead for Jerry. Mrs. Barry makes love to Tommy so that her daughter will be jealous and come back to him. Tommy reciprocates the love of his mother-in-law to be. Jane and Mary Lou are not fooled by the infatuations of Jerry and plot his downfall.

The happy ending brings about a reconciliation between all of the young couples and with the melting of the snow the characters are released from their marooned prison and return to civilization.

The orchestra was composed of the following: Ralph Ireland, director; Ted Masters, first trumpet; Norman Galleher, second trumpet; Lowell Heaney, trombone; Palmer Nye, saxophone; Ed Shearburne, saxophone; Fred Hunt, saxophone; Keith Schroeder, drums; Clarence Johnson, bass; Leon Carroll, piano.
