NEBRASKA ALUMNUS BARES FACTS OF EXPEDITION

Losses because he is refused the right of check-weighman? Does he know how much wage is lost because the miner is forced to use script at a company store to buy goods for a price 35 percent higher than its cost in the nearby village stores?

WILLARD SPENCE ANSWERS CHARGE OF DAILY EDITOR

As a graduate of last year's class at Nebraska, and as a member of this expedition, I believe that my statements are worthy of the attention of the student body. I only ask for justification in this answer to that editorial.

DEAD MINERS 'BLUFFED'

The previous editorials which Spence mentions are presumably letters to the editor which he wrote while in school. Describing the stand taken toward the investigating students by the governor of Kentucky when he was appealed to, Spence says, "The students were not treated bluntly by the governor. He spoke the truth when he said 'I can guarantee safety to no one in Kentucky.'"

STUDENT SENSE

Students can be defended for many things which they are accused of doing. Their actions can often be justified and charges brought against them can often be refuted. There are times, however, when the actions of students are so foolish as to bring a blush to the faces of other college students.

too easily bluffed. The lady to whom he told this had been informed by a thug, 'I'd like to take you in the mountains and skin you alive, you little rat. I suppose she was bluffed, I suppose Frank, Taub, Dreiser, Crawford, and some of the miners who did not live to tell the tale were too easily bluffed.

"How were the students treated by Senator Costigan in Washington? Not so bad. Their complete report, given before a group of senators, will be printed for the action of his committee. If this report assists in bringing a senatorial investigation, in the eyes of the writer of 'Student Sense,' will our action still be pathetic and unjustified. It is true, we failed in our attempt to see Hoover, but he got our petition, and we were not kicked out of the white house either.

"The author says that students are criticized for such antics. When they returned, their report was received at the Plymouth theater by an audience of over one thousand. I suppose students will be popular so long as they provide 'bigger and better' athletes. Perhaps the writer is correct on his contention as to why students are criticized. He will not always be right, for we have 'bigger and better' depressions in the land of the free. His idea certainly will not hold for European students. Nor can it be said of Columbia university. Were it not that I doubt that all Nebraska students hold the opinion of the author of 'Student Sense,' I would almost be tempted to say something bad of my Alma Mater.

"As advice on the author's need of information regarding conditions in this sore spot of Kentucky, I will say that information cannot be gotten unless one goes there, then it is very difficult to return with the information. If he really wants to know something about it, particularly further enlightenment on his attitude of the miners on being studied, let him read Dreiser's new book on the report of his committee in Harlan, 'Kentucky Miners Speak,' is the name of it. If the only time he heard of an 'American Tragedy,' was from what the movies left of it, I suggest that he read this book of Dreiser's too."

nor wanted to know who had invited them and was told that no one had. Horton declared that if the students were so deeply interested in studying mining conditions they should apply to the proper authorities for entrance and they would undoubtedly be admitted. He advised them, however, to go home.

When students perform antics of this nature it is no wonder that the public criticizes and wonders. When a group of students go into fields where they are obviously not wanted upon the frail excuse that they want to study conditions they are not exercising the best of judgment. If they are really interested in getting into the coal fields for purposes of study they should apply to proper authorities for permission to do so.

It is entirely obvious that the miners do not want to be studied. A short time ago a number of writers were set upon and ousted from the region for the same reason. Their complaints rose to the skies, but they stayed out. The students and the writers seem to forget that those striking miners are people and not animals to be studied in a zoo. Those people do not want to be studied and their rights should be respected. A reversal of the situation would not be looked upon with favor, that is certain. Just imagine a group of Kentucky miners visiting the University of Nebraska campus to study social conditions.

There is little justification for the actions of those students. Their actions, in the first place, of going to the field were scarcely justifiable, and their later actions of going to the governors with their complaints does them no credit. If students wish to battle the criticism against them they should take care not to do things which are bound to bring that criticism.
