COLLEGE WORLD

The budget for this year in the University of Texas contains an item of a million and a half dollars for main operating expenses.

Oil has been discovered on newly acquired university lands in Texas.

One-half of this year's graduates of Alabama college have received positions, according to the Alabamian.

Coeds at the University of Missouri may not speak to male students on the street for more than three minutes at a time. They must also have a chaperone when they go to see a dentist, according to a recently issued decree from the dean of women.

Figures compiled by Yale, Princeton and Harvard graduates, states the Oklahoma Daily, indicate that four years in college are equal to two good house parties.

Indicating that Oklahoma sophomores will rule the freshmen with an iron hand this year is the headline in The Oklahoma Daily. "Ruf-Naks order freshmen to wear red caps or—." Isn't it nice that the freshmen will get the choice of which end is to be red?

A farmer in western Nebraska has a plan that may interest fraternalists who are now busy "whittling" their budgets. He has announced that he will sell potatoes from his field at ten cents a bushel. Fraternities might find it worth their while to give their pledges the job of going to the farm and picking the potatoes and bringing them back to Lincoln. At least the plan would be more practical than making the low pledges bury cats in graveyards.

Glenn Hedlund, Nebraska graduate of a few years ago but since at Cornell university, was on the campus last week end. He is about to become Dr. Hedlund. Since graduating from Nebraska he has received his master's and is about ready now for his doctor's degree.

Financial conditions in the east are much the same as here in the midwest although one does not hear of the "depression" so commonly about school. Glenn intimated while here. Students attending Cornell usually come from families having an excess of cash and as a result the depression does not bother them a great deal.

No one knows where Otto Dillon is. . . Clara Day is another reader. Who is next? . . . Every one on the Ag campus wonders who writes the Observer column. . . Dr. Goss of the agricultural college was once quite an athlete back in an eastern university. . . O. S. Bare, extension entomologist, was no "set-up" as a ball player in other days.

College of agriculture students who attend the annual faculty reception Saturday night in the student activities building won't be forced to "shake" the hand of every professor in the college. Rather the committee in charge of the reception line has announced a "depression" reception line. Where over ten stood in line in other years, the number has been whittled down somewhat this year. Those to be included in the reception line include Chancellor and Mrs. Burnett, Dean and Mrs. W. W. Burr, Miss Margaret Fedde, Dean and Mrs. T. J. Thompson and Amanda Heppner. Regents of the university have been invited to attend also.

Getting away from the traditional hand-shaking, however, will be a relief.

Aside from Dick Moran: No, eight-lets have not been produced as yet. . . Henry Sexton, popular man at the Ag college in other years, is not in school as yet. . . P. W. Meredith is trying out for the dairy products judging team. People should never arrive at science lectures late. It might hurt their standing. . . Dr. Charles C. Talbot, who graduated from the Nebraska dental college last spring, is located at Alliance. If ever through the city and are enjoying a tooth-ache, he would appreciate the business. But business is good. . .

Starting out under the leadership of Jesse Livingston, the Ag club on the college of agriculture campus gives promise of "doing things" this year. At their Tuesday evening meeting, they planned the Farmer's Formal and initiation ceremonies. Given the backing of all students, the club is bound to succeed this year.

I Was a Smart Freshman
When I was a freshman I thought I was so smart I could pick up all of the news without the aid of the Daily Nebraskan. Needless to say I've subscribed ever since. I wouldn't be without it. It is only $2.00 a year. I thought I was smart, but I surely was dumb."

I am an Activity GIRL
"How in heck can I watch the others working in activities unless I watch their progress in the papers? That gossip column is worth $2.00 a year alone. Maybe if I wait long enough my name will appear in it. Anyway, if it doesn't, I can surely get in on the dirt about the other girls in activities."

My Son Spends Lots of Money
"My son goes to college and he surely does send back the cancelled checks. Yesterday I got one from the bank written to the Daily Nebraskan for $2.00. That kid has more sense than I thought he had. Just a chip off the old block. He spends his money for an authorized campus publication."

I am Professor
"There are lots of things that professors need more than a daily paper, but just try to get along without then too. I can mine mailed mailings through the campus same price. Just think, only $2.00 for a whole year. That's less than a cent a copy."

An Old Grad Takes a Look at Us
"Too bad they didn't have the "Rag" in '03. We really did miss a grand old institution. If any news broke, well, we got it the best way we could. Today all you need to do is watch the papers. Fires, raids, parties, dances, and even lost and found. All for only $2.00 a year. Cheap, I think."

I am a Social Hound
"All of the girls at the house say I am a social hound. Well, who wouldn't be if they read the society news daily. You surely can keep in touch with the campus social events. And at only $2.00 a year."

I Wrapped My Laundry in a "RAG"
"Last week I sent my laundry home wrapped in a Daily Nebraskan. Dad wrote back: 'Say, subscribe for me, too. Here's a check for ten dollars.' I guess I fooled him. It only costs $2.00 a year. Well, anyway it's going to dad. It's next best to being here himself."

The Lady With the Sweet Voice
"The lady with the very musky voice will be glad to answer the Nebraska phone and take your subscription. Or better yet, we'll send one of our hand-some solicitors out to get your subscription. Call B6891 for your Nebraska subscription. We're listening."
