

SAUER'S INJURY MAY MEAN SHIFT IN HUSKER BACKS

Lee Penney and Steve Hokuf Given Trial Tuesday At Fullback.

If George Sauer, driving rod of the Husker backfield is not in shape for what is expected to be a grueling battle against Kansas Saturday, then Lee Penney or Steve Hokuf will step into Sauer's fullback position for the day.

Head Coach Bible has been contemplating such a change since Monday when an X-ray revealed a broken hand for Sauer, and Tuesday afternoon found both Penney and Hokuf receiving their initial tryouts in the backfield. Bible has two plans in mind, one with Penney backing up the line at defensive fullback, Hub Boswell occupying the Iowa's left end position on defense. Boswell would take over his right halfback post on offense in this switch. Another change would find Steve Hokuf at fullback on both offense and defense, but whether Steve will be used depends largely on the strength of his injured ankle.

Penney Has Experience.

Penney has had plenty of backfield experience, having played fullback last year in addition to four years in high school. Hokuf was stationed at this spot on last year's freshmen.

In the event that Boswell works into the end position, the two backfield quartets will be composed of Mathis, Masterson, Staab and Penney or Mathis, Masterson, Staab and Hokuf.

Dummy scrimmage against Ed Weir's freshmen, the latter using Kansas formations comprised the major part of Tuesday's drill. Short motion and regular speed pictures of the Minnesota game taken by Ray Ramsay were shown the variety preceding the outdoor exercises. The frosh will be instructed to go their hardest Wednesday afternoon, when they encounter the varsity in an open scrimmage, with the remainder of the week consisting of lighter practice sessions.

Ernie Kilbourne suffered a painful knee injury in the Minnesota game that has compelled him to slow up in workouts this week, but he should round into condition by Saturday.

Warren Debus, russet thatched Nebraska guard will be playing against a former teammate when the Huskers meet the Jayhawks this week end in the Homecoming clash at Lawrence, Ole NeSmith, 180 pound sophomore quarterback at Kansas this fall played with Debus for four years at Belleville, Kas. high school, so the acquaintanceship isn't merely casual. In addition to being good friends, the Kansan and transplanted Nebraskan also respect the grid prowess of the other.

Since we are discussing the K. U. football friendships of the 177 pound Cornhusker lineman, we should include the name of Dick Weaver, the "rabbit" of the Kansas squad. Weighing only 150 pounds, Weaver must depend upon his speed, and Debus says the Concordia, Kasas boy really has it. Warren played six years against Weaver in his prep school days, two in junior high and the remainder in high school.

Scout Bill Day came back from the Kansas-Iowa State game with some information that has wiped off in a hurry the barely evident smile of satisfaction from the faces of the Nebraska first stringers this week. Bill, in his emphatic way told the Husker coaching staff that the Scarlet team is going to be kept well occupied with the Kansas forces. Coach Ad Lindsey has added the spark, the fire that means the difference between a good outfit and a mediocre eleven. And with a backfield four some averaging 194 pounds plus speed, it isn't hard to believe Bill's word.

Bristol has been playing a heap of football at guard during the past two weeks, but he should. He is a cousin of John "Choppy" Rhodes, one of the most fiery, colorful players in Nebraska grid history. Rhodes is now head coach at the University of Wyoming.

CHAIRMAN PROPOSES JOINT PARTY MEETING

Gepson Asks Democrats and Socialists to Name Representatives.

WILL NOT BE DEBATE

John Gepson, chairman of the student organization of the Republican party, has proposed a joint meeting of the three national parties for the discussion of the many important campaign issues. Such a meeting, he feels, would tend to increase student interest in national politics.

In the following letter he extends an invitation to the leaders of the democratic and social parties:

"To the chairmen of the socialist and democratic clubs:

"Dear Sirs:

"We, the republicans of the University of Nebraska, feeling the need for further interest in national politics, invite the two opposing clubs to choose a speaker, either student or campaign, to speak, not debate, in a joint meeting of all three clubs. The time and place will be arranged by the chairmen of the clubs. Unlike our democratic opponents we feel the socialists to be of sufficient importance in college to warrant their inclusion in such a forum.

"Signed:

"JOHN W. GEPSON,

"Chairman Republican club."

Gepson added that an effort is being made to persuade the students of voting age to vote at the fall election. According to him they may secure information for absentee voting privileges by phoning Harry Salter.

There will be a meeting of the republican executive committee at three o'clock Thursday afternoon at which time some very important business will be considered, Gepson said.

RAY RAMSAY AND BOYD KREWSON FLY TO MINNEAPOLIS TO TAKE PICTURES OF CORNHUSKERS IN ACTION ON GRIDIRON

all the way to Minnesota. Their only stop was at Custer, Ia., ninety-five miles from Minneapolis, where they were forced to wait nearly an hour for gas. Arriving in Minneapolis at 10:30, they found their actual flying time to have been two hours and fifty-five minutes. From the air field they taxied to the Curtis hotel where they were hilariously received by the Nebraska team.

Krewson reports that the Minneapolis papers had been playing up Saturday's match as a practice game, but that the general feeling among the spectators and newspaper men with whom they talked, was that Nebraska's boys gave the Gophers a tough battle and in reality outplayed them.

Leaving Minneapolis at 10:45 Sunday morning, Ramsay's plane made a four hour and twenty minute flight back to Lincoln against a twenty-mile head wind. Krewson, who has had no previous flying experience was in control of the ship for five of their seven hours in the air.

Ray Ramsay plans to photograph the remaining four out of town games. Krewson will accompany him to Dallas, Tex., on Dec. 3 and to Iowa City on Nov. 5.

PENNEY MAY FILL IN AT HALFBACK, K. U. GAME

Known as the hardest tackler on the Husker squad, Lee Penney of Tabor, Ia., is being groomed along with Steve Hokuf to replace the injured George Sauer at defensive fullback for the Kansas game. Penney, shifted to an end position this fall, has been playing great ball, his work in the Iowa State and Minnesota games being of the brilliant variety. He substituted for George Sauer at fullback on last year's varsity.

Daily Nebraskan Gets a Letter of Praise Monday

The Daily Nebraskan received the following letter of praise from the exchange editor of the Daily Cardinal, publication of the University of Wisconsin, Monday:

"Unsolicited testimonials are rare; this is one.

"Daily I open about seventy-five college newspapers and glance over them. They come from the south, the west, from Canada and from the schools of Dr. Butler's Big Ten. I find none better than your sheet, as regards news but more especially as regards features. Your feature staff must be up on its toes all the time. Congratulations."

Former Dean of Arts College States Women Had No Role in U. S. History

Prof. John D. Hicks, dean of the college of arts and sciences at Nebraska last year, traced the role of women in American history in an address before the University league at the University of Wisconsin, where he is now connected with the history department. He declared that "women did not have any role or it was not shown." He then observed that the majority of historians were men.

The professor pointed out the significance of the feminine influence in our country's history and the progress which they have made to their present position. He believes their continuous struggle for equality, both political and professional, is an indisputable proof of the righteousness of their aspirations. With regard to women suffrage Professor Hicks thinks "it has been a tremendous boon, especially to the men. I commend and admire the policy of women smoking out candidates for office by making them appear in public and declare themselves as well as appearing on billboards." He also reminded the members of the league that women have led in movements for various social reforms and that a book written by a woman was particularly instrumental in the freeing of the slaves.

He contributes the cause for emancipation of women to the industrial revolution, for with the growth of factories came the beginning of women as wage earners and self-supporters.

"Throughout the progress of our country's history, women have led in humanitarian reforms. Since the earliest wars they have established hospitalization and furnished adequate care of the wounded. They were also in the forefront for the promotion of peace. The genius of American woman lies in her ability to work with other women," he concluded.
