A Gala Day.

OLD memories are revived today and tomorrow as the students of yesterday revisit the Nebraska campus for the annual Homecoming fete.

But the day will be more than a Homecoming. The day has been proclaimed "Nebraska day" by Governor Bryan and through the co-operation of the city of Lincoln a gala day is planned.

Seventeen bands from all parts of Nebraska and Kansas will be imported. Fourteen special trains will arrive Saturday morning carrying festive crowds from every point of the compass.

Over three hundred Nebraska city mayors, governors of three states and presidents of two universities have been invited. Parades and an all-day celebration have been added to the regular Homecoming affairs.

General admission to the game has been reduced to a dollar plus tax, the lowest figure since Memorial stadium was built.

In all this gigantic program students of the University of Nebraska form the central unit. The day centers around the annual Kaggie-Husker game in the afternoon and every indication of a real football game is in prospect.

Last year several hundred Nebraska students migrated to Manhattan where they saw one of the most thrilling gridiron shows in Cornhusker history.

Saturday as many K. A. students will be guests of Nebraska, arriving on a fourteen car special at 11 o'clock. A huge parade, with the Nebraska band leading, will meet and welcome the visitors.

With the University of Nebraska on display it is paramount importance that every Nebraska student possible be at the station when that train pulls in.

Let's go Nebraska. Let's show the Kaggies a real Nebraska welcome and a real Nebraska spirit behind the team that continues its Big Six conquest in the stadium Saturday afternoon.

The Daily Nebraskan joins the Nebraska student body and the University of Nebraska generally in bidding welcome to the returning grads, the people of Nebraska and the Kansas visitors who will be our guests Saturday.

Young Man's Fancy Turns to Caricature.

THE enthusiasm of the cynic to make a situation look as ludicrous as possible is comparable to the enthusiasm of the idealist which causes the latter to paint the millenium in every situation he describes.

Mr. Robert Burlingame in his desire to make a readable story, suitable for such a magazine as Vanity Fair, has adopted the style so acceptable to readers who like to laugh at some one's expense and has by the clever manipulation of words and phrases produced a highly amusing criticism of Nebraska and its citizens, which is nevertheless a severely distorted one.

Perhaps, however, Nebraska residents are far more sophisticated than Mr. Burlingame thinks. Perhaps they will enjoy his article in reading it rather than breaking out with vitriolic attacks on the author. It is so obvious that the facts of the case are subordinated to the writer's style that it is hardly probable that many will take his article seriously enough to cause the author the trouble which perhaps he may have anticipated as desirable publicity.

If anyone ever boasted of a beautiful Nebraska campus, Mr. Burlingame is the only one we know who has come in contact with him. If anyone ever considered Nebraska university comparable to Leipzig, we have failed to feel elated about it. If anyone has taken pride in the Nebraska capitol, he has the authority of nationally recognized artists for so feeling.

Nebraska citizens have their foibles, no doubt, and here's hoping they enjoy the caricature of them which Mr. Burlingame draws. Some of them we wish were foibles confined to Nebraska citizens only, but not so. Credulity, obnoxious piety, and ignorance are not qualities monopolized by any one state in this union. It has been noted by some observers that the most sophisticated surroundings frequently produce the most provincial inhabitants.

Nebraska's gaping farmers may strike Mr. Burlingame's funny bone, but a discerning observer will note equally ludicrous qualities in individuals who do not hold their mouths open when looking up at a tall building.

Mr. Burlingame is not the first offspring of the western backwoods who has stood agape at eastern sophisticates and their civilization as being the sumum bonum.

He has done a good job with his side of the picture, but he has not persuaded those who know Nebraska that there is not another side. That side is not what would gain him the honor of crashing the pages of Vanity Fair. Mr. Burlingame knew for whom he was writing.

Letters must be signed, but names will be withheld from publication if so desired.

Defense Against Defense.

FORCED to defend myself because of the remarks of J. Q. I. I deny his points of which these are two.

I contend, first of all, as I have always done, that the security of peace does not rest in armaments. The largest army and navy are not the solution. We cannot all have the largest and this undisciplined building can only result in a repetition of 1914, with more disastrous results.

Secondly, I contend that military discipline does not make men better citizens. My own observation on this campus leads me to believe it is more harmful than it is good. The manner in which students react is the best possible evidence and those reactions are the height of mockery.

I have no intention of relinquishing the slightest bit of ground or taking back my statements. I am certain my many pacifist friends will come to my defense for they too, have the courage of their convictions. J. B.

blue velvet hangings for the coliseum. The movement has been endorsed by university authorities, and other campus organizations have promised their co-operation in the matter.

Expect Large Crowd.

Chalmers Graham, in charge of ticket sales for the event, declared that the present trend indicated a crowd of about 1,100 persons. He pointed out, however, that there would be ample room since the entire coliseum floor would be used. Last year only two-thirds of the floor was used, and the party was not crowded.

Final publicity for the occasion was arranged Wednesday night, according to Jack Erickson, also a member of the committee. Posters were sent to all organized houses announcing the Columbia Broadcasting orchestra which will play the party and a large sign was erected in front of Pharmacy hall. An article on the party, accompanied by illustrations, will appear in the football program at the game Saturday.

Starts at 8:30.

Tickets to the party are being sold by members of the Interfraternity council and Corn Cobs, and they will also be on sale at the door Saturday evening. The price is $1.00 plus ten cents tax, and dancing will begin at 8:30.

"An open invitation to all means of colleges and their wives is hereby extended," declared Jack Erickson, Thursday afternoon. "They will all be welcome at the party."

Other invited guests will include Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Frankforter, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Arndt, Mr. and Mrs. John K. Selleck, Chancellor E. A. Burnett and Mrs. Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. MILLER & PALNE

SATIRICAL ARTICLE "NEBRASKA IN THE MAKE" WRITTEN BY WESLEYAN CAUSES MUCH LOCAL FACULTY MEMBER CAUSES MUCH LOCAL COMMENT.

"Lincoln Smug." He says: "Except for the capitol he is seconding the idea that Lincoln is an overgrown country town, and an university, Lincoln is a smug middle class town, conventional enough to satisfy the Methodist clergy and the republican party. Traveling men avoid Lincoln on weekends because of its rigid Sunday blue laws, which close theaters and all other places of amusement. Roadhouses are patronized only by university students trying to get devils on a midnight curfew."

Further paning of the police department concerning the two year old Lincoln bank robbery is included, and the Saline county gentry is criticized for possessing vowelless names, the monickers evidently puzzling Mr. Burlingame, native of Iowa, where the names are names. Neither end of the state is neglected, both Omaha and Scottsbluff coming in for a choice morsel of comment.

In adding insult to injury he concludes, "For a state that was settled by disappointed people who stayed only because they couldn't get farther west, Nebraska has done fairly well. Choppy Rhodes and Monty Munn are more illustrious alumni of the university than all the Rhodes scholars since Jameson's raid, but Nebraska has been spared the dullness of her Anglo-Saxon neighbors by preserving the native flavor of the Sioux, German and Irishman."

At least he grants it to us that Nebraska is a versatile commonwealth.

EXPECT SEVERAL HUNDRED AT AG COLLEGE FORMAL.

To Elect Queen. Every man attending the annual barn warming will vote for his favorite for queen of the formal. Three girls have filed for the honor and the men attending will not have the privilege of writing in other names on the ballots. Voting will be done at the student activities building as the guests enter and the queen will be presented through the intermission. It is expected Eleanor Dixon was the 1931 queen. Only senior girls, this year, however, are eligible for the award.

Favors and invitations for the formal were being given out Thursday afternoon from Dean Burr's office. Howard White, who is in charge of the committee on favors, said that they would be given out until late Friday afternoon so late purchasers of tickets might get theirs. The favors for this year's formal are different from any given out in former years.

Wear Traditional Clothes. Students in the college of agriculture were ready Thursday night to display their college spirit Friday when they are to wear overalls and aprons to classes. Girls registered in the college were reported to be enthusiastic over the plan and will co-operate today. Jesse Livingston, Ag club president, again Thursday urged every teachers convey the importance of recreation and joy to their pupils. However, he assured his audience that life is serious and that certain phases must not be regarded lightly.

Dr. H. E. Bradford, of the department of vocational education, visited Kearney on Thursday, Oct. 27, to deliver two addresses before the rural and agricultural sections of the Nebraska State Teachers' association. On Friday, he will speak on the general program of district number 4 at McCook.

Election returns will be announced Friday noon. Candidates are as follows: President—Grace G. Hyatt, Lincoln; W. E. Scott, Fairbury; Vice President—Mark W. DeJell, Clay Center; Dwight L. Williams, Crete.

Secretary—Howard Hamilton, Geneva; J. N. Regier, Seward. Treasurer—John G. Hansen, Superior; Blodwen Beynon, Lincoln.

Members of executive committee—L. E. Hudkins, Exeter; F. C. Thomann, Pawnee City. Lincoln Band Plays.

The order of the program for Thursday was a general session at which the Lincoln High band played and speeches were delivered by Dr. H. T. Hill, Dr. J. J. Muyskens, and Dr. Morris Fishbein. At 1:30 in the afternoon division meetings were held in various places at the university and at 3:30 section meetings convened. Thursday evening there was a general session again in the coliseum to hear the Lincoln high school choir and talks by Dr. George P. Hambrecht and Dr. H. H. Goddard.

Friday morning the convention will assemble in the coliseum and hear addresses delivered by Dr. W. A. Irwin on "Our New Economic Position" and Dr. Walter Jessup, "Education in a Troubled World." Between the first and last of these addresses a general business meeting will be conducted and new officers for the convention will be chosen. Division meetings will be held at 1:40 being followed by section meetings at various groups represented at the meeting. And at 8 p. m. a final general assembly will be held in the coliseum after which the convention will be formally dismissed.

Choose Officers. Thursday afternoon the various section groups and the division meetings heard speakers give talks pertaining particularly to the interest of that group. Officers for these individual gatherings were chosen.

With an attendance expected to reach the 1,000 mark today the twelfth annual convention of district 3 of the Nebraska State Teachers association opened in Norfolk Thursday morning.

Two addresses were given in the morning. State President R. R. McGee of Columbus gave a resume of teachers' association activities, stressing the fact that the teachers owed it to themselves and their profession to know as much about taxes and school finance as the farmers of the state who are so objecting to the amount of tax money used for educational purposes.

Dr. Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell college, Grinnell, Ia., delivered an address on "The Making of a New World," in which he advanced a number of refreshing theories. Bryan, came in for some teasing. The Wesleyan instructor seems to
