COMMITTEE SETS TICKET PRICE OF MILITARY AFFAIR

(Continued from Page 1.) be admitted to the gallery for thirty-five cents. A special attempt is being made to get men in the military department to attend in uniform.

Reserve Officers Invited. Reserve officers and members of the O. R. C. are invited to attend the ball, as well as all those who have any other military connections.

Competition is being stirred up in the ranks, and enthusiasm has been displayed by privates and officers who are to attempt to sell enough tickets to get the winners award. Any man selling $20 worth of tickets will receive a $2 ticket free. To those who sell tickets amounting to $16 will be awarded a $1.25 ticket. The high man in the unit will be given a special award, not yet announced. He will be named at the military ball.

The companies in the winning battalion will receive 1 percent of their rating in competitive drill. Progress of the various companies and individuals will be noted from week to week in the Daily Nebraskan.

A list of sub-committees will be posted Wednesday noon.

GRIDIRONIES

CNS.—You wouldn't believe it in a movie: Mud ankle deep... 15 seconds to go... score, 7 to 6 against his team... "Mike" Frankovich, sophomore, quarterback, University of California at Los Angeles, splashed behind his own goal... wobbled a pass to Ransome "Pants" Livesay, also a sophomore... who eluded two tacklers... ran the length of the field for the winning touchdown as the timer's gun ended the game... U. C. L. A. 12, Oregon 7!

Melinkovitch, Schwartz, Jaskwisch, Sheeketski and others make a jest of Notre Dame's "Fighting Irish" nickname—But how about Minnesota's "Terrible Swedes," with just three Scandinavians on the varsity; Oen, Lund and Hass? Kansas jacked Coach Bill Hargiss and his adopted Warner system after losing to Oklahoma... five days later, the new mentor Ad Lindsey, watched the Jayhawkers slam Iowa State—which should prove something.

Add freak football accidents: Lightning struck Woodmere Academy squad during a huddle... 18 injured... one died.

Theodoratus, Washington State fullback, weight 240 pounds, is favored for a 5-year loan by "Cotton" Warburton, 142-pound U. S. C. quarterback... fall of the mighty!—Auburn has a griddier weighing 303 pounds.

Nominations for our own zizzling All-American eleven, every man of which plays a different position!—Zenner, Chicago; Zonga, Seton Hall; Ziegler, Loyola; Zaramba, New York; Zanarina, Cornell; Zapustas, Fordham; Martinez-Zorella, Cornell; Zimmer, Chicago; Zimmer, Clarkson; Zabriskie, Pomona, and Zimmermann, Tulane—Zowie! Get 'em together and let Zippie coach 'em!

All-American team this year should have at least one Brown. Among the best: Capt. Tay Brown, Southern California; Brown, Army; Brown, Georgia; Brown, Oregon, and Brown, Westeyan—Recalls this year's game between Brown and Springfield... Brown had two tackles, L. C. and R. K. Brown... opposed by R. B. Brown, halfback for Springfield!

THE CLOTHES LINE

Among the frocks worn by coeds at the Homecoming party Saturday evening, a few stood out by reason of unusual colors or original designs.

One of these was Ruth DeKlotz' ankle length dress of purple silk crepe fashioned with a high round neckline and short puffed sleeves. Alternating rows of purple and white silk braid were applied to the sleeves and bordered the neck and hemline of the frock. With this she wore a matching purple turban. Purple, if you ask us, is a coming color.

Another exceptionally distinctive outfit was that worn by Martha Coffee, a guest on the campus from Chadron. Gray rough crepe was the fabric, in unusual combination with bright red velvet. The new drop shoulder line was emphasized by sleeves of the velvet extending from a few inches below the shoulder to the elbow. A twisted belt of the gray buckled in back.

Her turban, also of the gray, was trimmed with a flat bow of the velvet. (Note: One established fashion fact seems to be fabric turbans to match the frock.)

Gold colored crepe combined with soft brown fashioned the frock that Leona Anderson wore. Following fashion's dictates, the neckline was high in front and low in back, where flat brown flowers were used for emphasis. Brown was also used for the extremely large elbow puffs.

Willie McHenry looked lovely in bright blue velvet. The sleeves were short and puffed and the neckline round and low-cut. The only trimming—the dress had that simplicity suitable to velvet—was a row of fine fabric flowers across the sash. Her turban was of matching velvet. (Another confirmation of this vogue.)

Another of those purple tones that promise to appear in numbers before the season is over was seen in Ruth McLaughlin's dress. Beaded white satin showed from beneath the sleeves, which were slit from mid upper-arm to wrist, and also from beneath the bolero jacket. This particular purple had a decided blue cast.

INSTITUTION WILL AWARD PRIZES FOR BEST MANUSCRIPTS

With a view of helping talented beginners in the literary field, the Wordsmith Institution announced that it is awarding a prize and finding a market for first class manuscripts submitted to it. The prizes, distributed in January and July are: Five hundred dollars for every momentous novel or romance; three hundred dollars for scholarly treatises; and fifty dollars for short stories. Contestants must use Standard dictionary and live west of the Mississippi river. Address manuscripts to the Chicago office, 2658 S. Harding Avenue.

SURVEY OF UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA GRADUATES INDICATES THAT COLLEGE EDUCATION HELPS WITH JOB GETTING.

(Continued from Page 1.) that 31 percent of the people who had jobs were afflicted with frustration and sorrow. However, this can not be accepted at face value because the Greek letter organizations include professional as well as social groups.

38 Percent Phi Beta Kappa. Phi Beta Kappa having come in for quite a bit of criticism lately, it is interesting to note that of the number answering the questionnaire, and eleven out of the twenty-nine had jobs. This makes the Phi Beta Kappa percentage 38 which is higher than the Greek group taken as a whole.

A moral for the class of '33 is seen in the results of the survey—find a mate as soon as possible, for out of the eighty-five who were married, thirty-five had found jobs. This means that the chances of a married man of finding a job are 4 percent greater.

Professions claimed nearly 60 percent of the graduates who found jobs. Of this group there are almost three times as many teachers as any other single group. Doctors rated second with 20 percent of the professional people and dentists and lawyers are tied for third place with about one-seventh of this group. Internes make up the rest with 19 persons in all.

Other Jobs Vary. The remaining 186 jobs were varied to a great degree. Included were journalists, farmers, ministers, pharmacists, social workers, accountants, clerks, sales people, commercial artists, grocers, radio announcers, shoemakers, and so on ad infinitum.

Out of the 711 who had no jobs, 116 indicated that they were going to some school to take up graduate work. Others are traveling in foreign countries, some are studying at foreign universities and two are deceased. Many of the women had made no attempt to get a job, preferring to stay at home with freedom from all commercial cares. All in all, it seems from this survey that it pays a young person to spend four years at some higher educational institution.

The mass production method of education which has swept the country over the past twenty years has occasioned much thought among educators. Universities have gone democratic—their motto is higher education for everyone. The day is past when only the very scholarly or those of professional aspiration attend college. The old curriculum of mathematics, Greek, Latin, grammar and philosophy has given way to training courses for machinist, druggist, woodworker, bookkeeper and of course the standby professions. The old university turned out scholars, the new university turns out a few less scholars in proportion but many, many more trained men and women. Employers are asking trained workers, the university aims to train. And so it is that each year more employers are having more trained workers for their selection, and training has spread into the ranks of more kinds of workers.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

The Demand Exceeds the Supply!

Every day many students come to this office in search of articles which they have lost on the campus, but most of the time we have the same old story to tell them, "Sorry, but it hasn't been turned in yet."

The Daily Nebraskan maintains the Lost and Found department for the convenience of the students of the university. That is why we implore you to return any articles which you may find, regardless of how small or how little value it may have. If after one month's time the article which you have returned is still unclaimed, we will return it to you.

There are at present many articles which have not been claimed. The person who lost the valuable pair of white gold glasses may have them by calling at the office. The same is true for the Carlton college ring. And the same for the many other things in the department.

Stop in the Nebraskan office today if you have lost anything. We want to help you.
