Asking Alms From The Athletic Department.

If student activities are worth having at all and worthy of the financial support they require, they are worthy of having an independent source of income on which they can depend. Under present conditions many student activities on the campus are largely dependent upon the fluctuating fortunes of the athletic treasure chest.

If the athletic schedule is good, the weather good, the gate receipts large, student activities may expect to have their budgets approved in full. After the coaches are paid, the equipment purchased for the team, the minor sport programs taken care of in good shape, the interest and principal on the coliseum bonds met, there may be some leavings for the various student activities.

Those organizations which have concessions to make their own money are usually able to get along well enough if they are lucky, but other student groups cannot tell whether they will be able to perform their customary functions or any new functions until they find out what condition the athletic department is in.

A student activity tax would remedy this situation. Organizations who function in the interests of all students would be able to know definitely what funds would be placed at their disposal. And the athletic department itself would benefit without at the same time having a prior claim to the student activity funds. It would know definitely how much money it would receive from students and could forego the uncertainty as to gate receipts so far as the student body is concerned. Furthermore it would not be obliged to expend money and energy in boosting the sale of student athletic tickets.

We have already pointed out the fact that the student body would be able to receive the benefits of these various activities at lower cost than at present. The fact that every student would pay a certain fee would mean that this composite fee would be considerably less than the cost of every benefit purchased separately. The advantage of independent support which student organizations would enjoy under the activity tax system is merely another advantage besides the chief fact that the tax would give every student more for less money.

Farmers are having a holiday movement, bankers in Michigan had a whole week's holiday. How about forming a Students Holiday association? There's already a trend in that direction.

Perhaps the most obnoxious form of spring fever is the annual revival of student politics. The custom is probably related to the spring sheep shearing.

The Ivy day orator should be required to give a campaign promise as to how long he expects to speak. Competition would eventually eliminate the speech altogether.
