BRENKE ANNOUNCES ANNUAL STUDENTS' HONOR CONVOCATION

Frederick Hunter to Talk At Affair in Coliseum On April 10.

The annual students' honor convocation will be held at the university coliseum, from 10 to 12 a. m., April 10, according to an announcement released yesterday by Professor W. C. Brenke of the mathematics department, chairman of the convocation committee. This year's convocation will be addressed by Frederick M. Hunter, honor graduate of the university in 1905, who is a member of the foundation for the advancement of the social sciences at the University of Denver.

To Be Held Earlier.

The convocation, at which the upper ten percent of the students in the senior class are announced, will be held much earlier this year than last.

"Wishing to place more stress upon the importance of the convocation, the committee has set the date earlier this year in order to get it away from other events that take place during the latter part of the year, and make it a separate college affair," stated Professor Brenke.

In former years the convocation has been held in the evening, but this year the committee in charge felt that the affair would be better attended if held during the day, as there are more students at that time.

Speaker Recommended.

The speaker for the honors convocation comes to the university highly recommended. After graduating from the university, Mr. Hunter made rapid progress in the field of education, becoming president of the national education society in 1921. Since that time he has been active in educational research. He has also written a number of volumes concerning education and teaching methods.

As previously announced, Duncan Sowles and Art Bailey will play opposite each other in the leading roles in the show. Bailey will impersonate Lynn McAlister, owner of the ranch, and Sowles will take the part of Spud Warren, veteran rancher and present manager of the Bar-O ranch.

COUNCIL WILL LEARN LIMIT OF AUTHORITY

Copy of New Rule to Be Put Before Faculty Committee.

Steps to definitely affirm or deny the validity of the Student council constitution were taken Wednesday night when the council passed by-laws defining its power to close nights. A copy of the new rule will be sent to the secretary of the faculty committee on student affairs whose members, it is assumed, will decide whether the council is within its authority in passing such rules.

A report of a conference with the secretary of the faculty committee, Miss Amanda Heppner, mittee. Miss Amanda Heppner, Brownell, who indicated that the council stood in danger of having its acts invalidated by the faculty committee, operating under a long standing provision in the university catalog.

Unanimous Sentiment.

Student council members expressed a unanimous sentiment that the new rules be passed and sent to the faculty committee secretary. "Until that body acts, we shall operate under our constitution," one member pointed out.

The university catalog provision declares:

"All non-athletic organizations and social functions are under the supervision of the senate committee on student organizations which may enact such special rules, subject to the chancellor and the board, as it may deem necessary for the proper control of such organizations. Organizations coming into financial relations with the public shall submit their accounts to this committee for audit."

Going on record as endorsing Religious Emphasis week, the council adopted a resolution by Jack Erickson commending the aims of the plan, and proffering the aid of the council forum committee in any material way possible.

Cornhusker Staff Starts Last Big Effort to Bring Out New Yearbook

Coming down the home stretch, beginning the last big effort that is to culminate months of labor and painstaking care, the 1933 Cornhusker staff is about to complete material for the new year book. In another week or so the publishing company will have the book ready for their presses and another Cornhusker will have been issued.

In this "home stretch," however, there is much to do and therein comes the most tedious part of issuing a Cornhusker—that of reading and correcting proof of all the copy that the staffs have been preparing for several months.

Since the first few weeks in school a large staff of workers has been carrying on for one of Nebraska's oldest traditions. Photographers have covered every important event that has happened during this school year. Hundreds of pictures have been recorded from this campus and others where Nebraska students have followed the varsity teams the past season.

The business manager's staff has conducted two successful sales drives and dozens of other students have spent many hours in the production of the 1933 book.

The date when the book will be issued has not yet been announced, but it is believed that it will be in the near future. As soon as proofs are read and corrections are made the printers will start turning them out and the 1933 Cornhusker will be a reality.

It will be a different Cornhusker than any of the previous books, said the editor, who with his staffs has brought out many new and different ideas in striving to make it a book truly representative of Nebraska university, the professors, the students and their activities on the campus.

A larger feature section, interspersed with interesting views of campus scenes, fraternity and sorority groups, juniors and seniors and many others will give to the book a value that cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

SENATE PREPARES TO TAKE UP BILL

Senator Callan States That Upper House Committee Strongly Favors Budget for University as Submitted by Governor Bryan.

With the appropriations bill before the House for a third reading following a stormy session yesterday, the senate finance committee prepared to take up the huge measure, and according to Chairman Callan of the senate finance committee, will spend at least two weeks in whipping the bill into shape for consideration by the senate as a whole.

The senate committee jumped the gun by meeting Tuesday Chancellor E. A. Burnett and Regent Earl Cline and other university officials concerning the university appropriations, but no conclusion was reached.

Chairman Callan pointed out however that the senate committee favored strongly the proposed Bryan budget for the university, and cannot reconcile themselves with the house committee's slash of several thousand dollars.

Stormy Session in House.

The house, yesterday, went thru a stormy session which saw Speaker O'Malley on the floor to defend the present recommended budget from further onslaughts. In the afternoon session, following the recommendation of the university investigating committee, Meier of Lancaster offered an amendment to the university appropriation bill providing that in order to effect economies, the board of regents be authorized to discontinue or limit activities not directly connected with the agricultural, academic or professional education.

Amendment Defeated.

The amendment was defeated by a one sided vote following vigorous protests from representatives from the western part of the state, who feared that the agricultural experiment stations would be removed.

Later in the afternoon Representative Cone, of Valley, offered another amendment to the university appropriation bill by proposing another slash of $132,000, entirely eliminating the agricultural extension division. The motion was voted down by house members following a heated debate.

ENGINEERS SELECT THEME FOR DISPLAY

Chemists Will Carry Out Idea of 'Practical Application.'

"Practical Application," is the theme which has been recently adopted by the chemical engineering department for their displays in Engineers' week to be held May 4 to 6. Engineer's week becomes of age this year when the twenty-first annual celebration is held.

One of the projects in the field of "Practical Application," pertains to the results which are obtained from mixing alcohol and gasoline.

Bill Pending.

There is a bill now pending action in the United States congress and also in the Nebraska state legislature which if passed would make it compulsory for commercial dealers to mix from 10 percent to 20 percent alcohol with their gasoline. The bill is being considered in an effort to produce a larger market for corn.

The chemical engineering department will present to the public in their display which will be on exhibition in Chemistry hall the night of the engineers banquet the various phases of this project. Features of the display will be their demonstration of mixing alcohol and several different standard commercial brands of gasoline. The possibilities, advantages, and disadvantages of this mix will be illustrated. Illustrative experiments will be in progress continually and charts will be used to better clarify the objectives.

Show New Product.

Another display will show a new product recently introduced by Cudahy of Omaha to compete with Crisco, a cotton seed oil product. The new product is called Hydrogenated lard.

Engineers' week opens with the Engineer's open house to the public. The following morning the convocation will be held which is primarily a pep rally. The picnic or fun fest will be held in the afternoon with the engineer's banquet following in the evening.

The principle purpose of the banquet is as a reunion affair. Many alumni of the engineering colleges are expected to attend. Prominent speakers are to be procured to address the group and engineering awards for the year are to be made.

Committees Selected.

The most recently selected committees are those appointed by George Gates, chairman of chemistry department group. He has named as his assistants Russell Beers, chairman of the open house;
