ENGLISH EDUCATOR GIVES ADDRESS AT STUDENT MEETING

Wylie Contrasts Life and Habits at Oxford With Newer Schools.

Contrasting the life and habits at Oxford and other of the older English schools with that of the newer institutions, Sir Francis Wylie, noted English educator and former Oxford secretary of the Rhoades scholarship board of trustees, addressed the Tuesday morning convocation of students and faculty members in the Temple.

"Oxford, being a part of the system of educational institutions dating back to the Middle Ages feels a definite interest in other universities of which the University of Nebraska is one," he stated. He continued outlining the broad background of tradition surrounding the origin and development of Oxford tracing by comparison its relation with other European universities.

"Oxford does not claim to be the oldest university, but it is old enough to have a traditional background dating back to about the twelfth century," he said.

Wylie created a great deal of interest when he told of some of the restrictions and duties of Oxford professors. When the institution was first founded he illustrated how different the rules of Nebraska university are from those of Oxford when he declared that the instructors could not "cut" or be absent from a class without the student's permission. He also declared that each class session starts exactly on the bell and ends on it without running overtime. He stated that if a pro-

Hertzler Comments on Convocation Fee as Part of Activity Tax Plan

Proposed Levy Would Bring Famous Lecturers for Student Meets.

Rockwell Kent, Bruce Bairnfather, Floyd Gibbons and other nationally famous lecturers might be enjoyed by Nebraska students if the convocation fee in the activity tax now before the student body for consideration is adopted, was the opinion of J. O. Hertzler, chairman of the convocation committee for the university.

Declaring that the additional revenue from the activity tax in addition to what ever aid the convocation committee might receive from the general fund of the university would enable the students to enjoy a very imposing array for their yearly convocation program, Mr. Hertzler endorsed the idea as one of high benefit to the student body.

"Variations in program, including art, music, literature, and other lines of student interest could be

STUDENTS TO OBTAIN 1933 YEARBOOKS THIS WEEK, STATES SKADE

Office Will Be Open From Eight to Five O'clock Each Day.

Students who purchased 1933 Cornhuskers may obtain their copies at the Cornhusker office any day this week, according to announcement made by Charles Skade, business manager.

The office will be open for distribution from 8 to 5 o'clock each day starting Wednesday. Approximately nine hundred and seventy-five books are expected to be distributed this week.

All students are urged to call for their books as soon as possible. Final payment of $1.50 on books purchased during the fall sale and of $1.75 on those purchased during the final sale must be made before books will be released. The business staff estimated that nearly five hundred students utilized the installment plan of purchasing this year.

That the 1933 annual is truly an outstanding piece of work is the opinion of alumnae and faculty members who have inspected it. Among the novel and distinctive ideas incorporated in the book are the thirty-two page feature section, announcement of five Cornhusker Coeds, and the two-tone beauty section. The book is devoted to dads of students, a theme which is carried out in student art work throughout the book.

Orders from all parts of the United States for the 1933 Cornhusker have been received and are now being filled, thus assuring the book of a nation-wide circulation.

COMPANY PUBLISHES M. H. WESEEN'S BOOK

Title of Work Is 'Write Better Business Letters.'

"Write Better Business Letters" is the title of Prof. Maurice H. Wesen's latest book which has just been published by the Thomas Y. Crowell company of New York. Professor Wesen, a member of the English department of the university, is well known for the several books which he has written, one of which, "Words Confused and Misused," has been revised and reprinted for use in England.

Professor Wesen's latest book is made up largely of examples of good and bad business letters and will prove valuable to business men who desire to master the art of writing good business letters for the purpose of increasing their profits and having the satisfaction of knowing that they are doing things in the right way. The book makes plain what to do and what not to do in the writing of inquiries, requests and replies to requests, order and acknowledgment letters, collection letters, letters of complaint and adjustment, letters of application, and especially letters which will appeal to the prospective customer, capture and hold his attention and finally, persuade him to buy.

In this book, Professor Wesen states that we must write as we would talk and should therefore avoid stereotyped expressions, foolish and worn out formalities. These mistakes make dead and ineffective letters and it is a wonder that they ever get results, he pointed out. The author says that this is not the case for the standards of business letter writing are still low although they are gradually improving as the importance of good business correspondence becomes better understood.

This is seventh book which Professor Wesen has written and had published. This list includes two text books which are being used extensively and a dictionary of English grammar which has aroused nationwide approval and Six Are Uncontested for Student Council Positions.

Fifty-five students in the university filed for student offices to be contested in the coming spring election which will be held Thursday.

The high number of filings received by the student activities office yesterday indicated that the coming election will be one of the most evenly contested in the history of the school, in addition to representing one of the highest number of students filing for a spring election on the campus in several years.

In spite of the general blanket filings of the two factions on the campus, six positions on the student council were uncontested, only one candidate filing from agricultural college, one from dentistry, two from fine arts, one from graduate college, and four filing from teachers college.

In addition to women candidates for membership on the council there was only one candidate filing as an independent, that being from law college. Six candidates who filed for office in the coming election were ruled ineligible.

Looking over the file of candidates there appears in the college of arts and sciences twelve women candidates, one of the highest number of filings received from that college for some time.

General indications by leaders of both parties indicate that there will be no break in the ranks for the coming contest this Thursday, with the Barb-Yellow Jacket fac-

CLARA CHRISTENSEN TO PRESENT RECITAL

Dramatics Student to Read Play at Temple May 11.

Clara Christensen, student under H. Alice Howell in the university dramatics department, will present her senior recital Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 o'clock in the Temple theater. She will read the complete play, "The Barretts of Wimple Street."

Miss Christensen has been one of the most outstanding members of the dramatics department and of the University Players. She will be remembered for her strong portrayals of the nurse in "Romeo and Juliette" and of Mrs. Frazer in "The Last of Mrs. Frazer" during this year's dramatic season. In her junior year Miss Christensen played in "Barkley Square" and "Beggars on Horseback."

The public is invited to attend the recital which Miss Howell predicts to be of exceptional interest in the line of dramatic entertainment.
