ALL QUIET ON AG COLLEGE CAMPUS AFTER ELECTION

Thursday. They were unopposed. They are Mark Hackman, Farm House; Phil Henderson, Farm House; Katherine Agnew and Mildred Tickler.
Little interest was manifested in the races for various offices of Ag club. Only 54 votes were cast. John Lowenstein, Farm House, is the new president, having been unopposed on Thursday's ballot. Howard White, Farm House and varsity track man, showed unexpected strength in the vice president contest. He won over Bill Waldo, Alpha Gamma Rho, by a comfortable margin. Waldo is an outstanding student on the campus and active in student affairs.

For the second time Elmer Parlik, Farm House, was elected to an office in the club. He won out last week. Thursday members of the club elected him treasurer for the coming year.
A barb candidate, Bill Donahue, was victorious in the race for secretary of Ag club. He had a good is member of Palladian society.
The Thursday election culminated a protracted election campaign on the agricultural college campus. Farm House and the barbs were linked together in forces which enabled them to land all offices.
It is doubtful if another "repeat" election will be necessary on the campus in future years, student leaders of all factions say. Rules for such contests in years to come will comply with recommendations made by the ag executive board and the faculty election committee.
