

Hunter Praises Nebraska as Great School; Notes Changes Since 1905

Denver Chancellor Student Here When University In Two Blocks.

Dr. Frederick M. Hunter, chancellor of Denver university and graduate of the University of Nebraska, professed, at the conclusion of his three days here devoted to addressing the summer session students, a warm affection for and a strong feeling for this university.

"The Nebraska state educational institution is," he declared, "one of the wonderful universities of the world."

The recent action on the part of the state legislature in regard to the limitation on the budget, Mr. Hunter considers a very grave error. Measures the smallest bit more drastic he feels would have spelled the disintegration of the school which, he contends, has displayed strength and resistance of a most admirable nature.

"To in any way cripple the University of Nebraska would be to deal one of the severest injuries that could be dealt to the people of Nebraska."

It has influenced the lives of its students to the extent that they have achieved thru education gained here as much, I believe, as has any other educational institution, and more than have a great many.

"From a list of 100 prominent men and women who were graduated by a certain university of twice the enrollment of this, and from which I received a degree, I could not discover one-fifth the number of world figures that I did from a similar list of prominent persons who had been graduated from Nebraska."

Dr. Hunter attended Nebraska when it was covered only of two city blocks enclosed by a high fence, when University hall was the main academic center, when there was no stadium, no schools of fine arts, drama, dentistry, pharmacy, business administration and journalism.

He maintains that even then the University of Nebraska was outstanding among educational institutions.

He remembers when The Daily Nebraskan was first issued with his brother-in-law as a staff official, as the result of a merger of two weekly publications, and immediately was termed "The Rag." Startling changes are noted by Dr. Hunter on the occasions of his visits to Lincoln. One of these is the appearance of the campus. He finds it to be constantly increasing in size and beauty, and he included in his remarks the state state capitol, of which he said:

"A new school of architecture has been founded by the Nebraska state capitol. It is one of the most beautiful buildings in the world, and will be revolutionary in its effect upon Nebraska and upon the field of architecture."

Another difference upon which he commented was the change in the attitude of the student body from that which they evinced when he was attending school here in that there is a greatly increased interest in the school of education. He believes that the number of teachers college students who attended his 11 o'clock convocation Wednesday was larger than the entire enrollment of the university as it was when he graduated in 1905.

ACCREDITED SCHOOLS LISTED FOR 1932-33

Few Changes in Secondary Rankings Made by University.

With seventeen changes from last year, the list of Nebraska secondary schools accredited by the university for 1932-33 has been published by A. A. Reed, director of the extension division.

Dropped from major accreditation was Immaculate Conception academy at Hastings which eliminated high school subjects from its curriculum; and from the minor list Crab Orchard high school which dropped its twelfth grade. Berwyn, Primrose and Rokeby were promoted from minor to full accreditation. The following schools were added to the minor accredited list: Ashton, Archer, Bingham, Center, Clinton, Dixon, Holstein, Ingham, Oconto, Odessa, Roca and Stockdale. Holy Family academy at Lindsay was demoted to minor rating.

Accreditation by the university entitles graduates of a high school to enter the university, and nearly all colleges and universities in the United States, without entrance examination. The requirements for accreditation are fixed by the university. One hundred thirty of the fully accredited schools are also accredited by the North Central association of colleges and secondary schools to which accreditation is granted on application after meeting certain equipment, curriculum and teacher requirements.

Following are the fully accredited schools for 1932-33:

We Feel A Big Breaker Coming!

And far be it from us to gaze "dark-sidely." No, quite the contrary are we, who just know there are going to be more and hotter suns with the passing days. We study the zodiac, in languid off moments, and go over the learning about Nebraska summers—acquired during fifty-odd years of Miller & Paine existence. And we feel this summer will be the breaker of all records on the Fahrenheit (we always do). Then sally we forth with a cool recommendation or two to those who matter in our life. SO HAVE—
