PRE-GAME SPIRIT REACHES HEIGHTS SELDOM ATTAINED

Three Hundred Fans Arise At Dawn to See Gridders Off.

COACHES PLAYERS SPEAK

Students Exonerated Blame In Wednesday Evening Rowdysim.

Three hundred students rallied at the Burlington station at 6:45 Thursday morning as a sendoff to the team as they started on the trip to Pittsburgh. The rally was a culmination of a series of pep events beginning Wednesday morning and reaching the peak in a big bonfire that evening.

Answering the demands of the crowd at the station Coach Bible, his co-workers Brown and Schulte, with Game Captain Sauer spoke to the cheering students, pledging their best in the game with the Panthers. The other game captain, Bishop, appeared before the rally, but did not speak.

The high point in the pre-game enthusiasm was reached in the bonfire spectacle on the drill field behind the Coliseum Wednesday evening and the snake-dance through the downtown section that followed. Traffic in the business district was tied up by the procession of cars and those on foot. The cheer leaders kept the spirit of the Nebraska supporters hot with spasmodic stops for organized cheering.

Part of the crowd invaded the foyer of the Stuart theater upsetting the advertising displays and breaking a pane of glass. The same group "crashed" the side door of the Greater and usurped seats in the balcony. They departed however when they were asked to show their ticket stubs. According to the theater ushers some of whom are university students themselves, the onslaught on the doors was not led by students.

Police cruisers followed the body of students through the business district looking for anyone damaging property, after the theaters

SEND WIRES TO HUSKERS BEFORE GAME SATURDAY

Team to Receive Telegrams from Campus Groups at Wm. Penn Hotel.

A concerted drive on the part of the Corn Cobs to get every fraternity and sorority, and every business house in Lincoln to send telegrams to the University of Nebraska's fighting Cornhuskers Saturday morning just before they meet the Pittsburgh Panthers, re-assuring them of the united support of Lincoln and Nebraska was under way Thursday, according to announcement of Henry Kosman, Cob president.

Wires Will Encourage.

"The team will be greatly heartened by the display of such backing as this," Kosman said. "I feel that it will give them added incentive to win if they know that although they are over 1,000 miles distant, every student at the university and every loyal Nebraska fan is backing them. The sending of telegrams is in itself a small thing, but to the team it will mean a great deal."

Work of the organization of the telegraphic rally will be carried on by the Corncobs in conjunction with the Innocents society. The idea, itself, originated with the Cobs, but since the student council has delegated rally power to the Innocents, they will carry on the work.

Co-Operation Urged.

"I hope that every fraternity and sorority on the campus will co-operate in this move," Lloyd Loomis, innocent in charge of rallies, said, "and I feel sure that they will. Almost every leading business house in Lincoln will also assist, I am sure."

Telegrams may be sent to the Husker football team in care of the William Penn hotel, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Ruling Prohibiting Smoking Within New Decorations Obeyed

"Observance for the first time last Saturday night at the homecoming party of the custom of not smoking inside the new coliseum decorations was very satisfactory, in fact better than was expected," according to a statement released yesterday by Byron Goulding, president of the Innocents society.

The society, which founded and sponsored the drive for funds to purchase permanent draperies for the field house making it one of the finest ballrooms in the middle-west, will continue to emphasize this custom until it is firmly established in the student body, the president added.

Smoking in Corridors.

Smoking will be permissible in the outer halls of the building during parties, he said, but the practice of smoking on the dance floor will be discouraged until it is finally stopped. This custom will be established as a tradition concerning the installation of the decorations as well as a safety precaution, he said.

Constant Government Manipulation Of Currency May Cause Waning of Public Optimism and Confidence, Says Arndt

Editors note: This is a fourth of a series of opinions by Prof. Karl M. Arndt of the economics department on current economic problems involving the government. In this article, Arndt explains the dangers of the government's meddling with the monetary system.

"It is true that confidence in economic leadership and faith in the ability of 'things to turn out all right in the end' cannot of themselves produce a stable and profitable business era, but it is also true that without confidence there can be no return to prosperity," stated Prof. Karl M. Arndt, of the economic department in commenting upon the dangers of experimenting with the monetary system. "It appears that the monetary program—if such may be said to exist—of the administration is in danger of sacrificing whatever confidence there is in American money."

Danger of Despair.

Long continued uncertainty, he said, about the objectives of the government must of itself produce despair. Frequent, hasty and rather unscientific experiments with money, presented to the public with much journalistic noise and over-optimistic statements
