Senator Norris' proposed amendment to the Nebraska constitution providing for a unicameral state legislature is faced with a history of legislative opposition to the plan with the most recent expression of dissatisfaction recorded by the state senate during the last session. bill similar to Norris' amendment providing for a one-house legislature was introduced in the state senate on Jan. 17 of this year and was defeated by that body after a committee hearing, 15 to 14. Boelts Presents Bill.

The bill presented in the senate Senator Boelts of Merrick as S. F. 100 suggested a one-house legislature of thirty-three members with a recall for the legislators. The proposition included the abolition of the present house of representatives leaving the senate as the only law making body but the phraseology was later changed substituting the name "legislature" for "senate" as the name of the remaining house.

A later amendment which was proposed, but failed to pass, increased the size of the single body with a decrease of the term of office from four years as in the original bill to two years. After the failure of the amendment the Room 306. bill was also voted down.

57.000 Signers Required.

The initiative which is to - b used to place the question on the ballot at the next election will require about 57,000 signers of the petition distributed so as to in-clude 5 percent of the voters in two-fifths of the state districts. According to the members of the political science department of the faculty interviewed Tuesday the idea meets with their approval but the policy seems doomed to failure by all indications by the action on the question as taken formerly in this state and other states.
