Barb Inter-Club Approves Proposal at Meeting Held Monday Evening; Present Plans Call for a Campus-Wide Vote on Proposition.

EMBODIES STUDENT ACTIVITIES, PUBLICATIONS

Name Committee of Organization Presidents to Probe Question; Will Compile Schedule of Costs; Send Survey to Board of Regents.

A revival of interest in the proposed student activities tax plan is taking place among the students following the action of a committee of organization presidents in considering the proposal again last week.

With the approval of the blanket tax plan by the Inter-club council taking place at its meeting Monday evening, and the Barb council ready to act Wednesday afternoon, a renewal of interest is being evidenced on the campus. According to present plans of the student council committee the proposition will be placed before the students for a campus-wide vote as they pay their fees for the second semester of school. This will take place late in January.

Several Activities Listed.

Plans for the general tax for the include a number of student activities and publications on the list. According to present plans the Daily Nebraskan, Cornhusker, Awgwan, Athletic Ticket, and Student Council will be enumerated. The total expenditure by the student for the year's activities could be lowered about five dollars from the existing cost in the system in which he pays for each of the activities separately.

The total assessment would probably amount to about $8 apportioned among the activities as follows:

Daily Nebraskan	$ 8.00
Cornhusker	$ 2.00
Awgwan	$ 2.00
Athletic Ticket	$ 4.00
Student Council	$.93

Committee Selected.

A committee of organization presidents was recently named by the student council to consider the question. This committee will compile a schedule of costs similar to the one above, will gauge opinion of faculty members, students, and men outside of the university, and will finally place the proposal before the students for the vote late in January. Evelyn Goulding was named to head the committee, and other members are John Gep-

MORTAR BOARDS ANNOUNCE PLANS MADE FOR PARTY

Faculty Grants Permission To Continue Dancing Till 12 O'clock.

With special permission to continue dancing until 12 granted yesterday by the faculty committee on student affairs, Willa Norris announced yesterday that final plans for the annual Mortar Board party to be held in the university Coliseum Friday night were complete.

It was suggested earlier in the week that programs for the dances, which are to be a feature of the party, be filled out early.

Lucille Reilly, Mortar Board member and chairman of a committee in charge of orchestra arrangements suggested yesterday that along with filling in names on the dance programs it will be well to designate a spot where the couple should meet before the dance, as there will probably be a great amount of confusion in finding partners.

Programs Have 12 Dances.

The programs, which are in the form of mortar boards, will provide for twelve dances. The remainder of the evening will be divided into two periods of six dances each with an intermission from 10:30 to 11. Exchanging of dances will be optional and it is quite permissible to dance a "straight" program with one person.

The number of the dance in session will be posted on a pedestal which will be placed in the orchestra shell, and will be changed after each dance. Jack Crawford and his Victor recording orchestra will play. This band has been heard recently by many university students. (Continued on Page 4.)

Campus Shivers As Cold Wave Heralds Arrival Of Winter

With a cold air wave sweeping across the great plains from Canada, the Nebraska campus experienced real winter weather the past few days, and according to T. A. Blair, official university meteorologist, it will remain chilly the rest of the week.

November's sunny days on the campus were four degrees warmer than last year, while 1930 and 1931 were both warmer than this year. Also Blair stated, 1925 and 1918 were warmer during the month of November than this year. The Missouri valley, according to Blair, has been one of the warmest sections of the country this fall.

Flurries of snow were forecast for the northern part of the state with colder weather in western Nebraska. Relief however was promised later this week with a slowly rising temperature.

YEAR BOOK EDITOR SETS FINAL DATE FOR PHOTOGRAPHS

Publish Late Pictures in Unclassified Section of Cornhusker.

"The Christmas deadline for the classified section is final," Magee stated. "Any photographs taken after Christmas will be relegated to the last part of the section and will be unclassified."

Avoid Rush.

Magee urged students who will be going home at Christmas time to have their photos taken at once and avoid an anticipated last minute rush next Wednesday. Lincoln students or any outstate students remaining in Lincoln during vacation will have the three days before Christmas in which to have pictures taken and are urged to do so not later than that time.

It is important that picture proofs be returned to the photographers and a choice designated before Christmas or the yearbook staff will make the selection itself. Magee announced. Panels will be made up immediately after the vacation period.

Official Photographers.

All photographs are to be taken at Rinehart-Marsden's, the official Cornhusker photographers. Price for junior and senior pictures is $2.50. For an additional 25 cents, the picture will also be included in the respective fraternity or sorority panel.

"We are working hard to make the class sections this year unusually distinctive," Magee stated. "Pictures are being taken against light backgrounds and will prove..." (Continued on Page 4.)

The loss was covered by insurance according to Mrs. H. L. Carpenter, one of the owners of the house. There was no damage on the first two floors, she stated as the fire was extinguished before extending that far, and much of the damage on the third floor of the house was caused by water.
