Agriculture Meeting Ends Thursday; Extension Worker Talks.

Organized Agriculture meetings on Ag college campus ended Thurs-day afternoon with a discussion of the government's present farm program by B. H. Hibbard, University of Wisconsin, which sent several hundred Nebraska farm people home chuckling and in good spirits.

Grace Frysinger, U. S. D. A. extension worker, preceded Hibbard on the closing program Thursday, discussing "The Farm Family Looks Forward." The morning was devoted to business meetings of the livestock producers, dairymen, and other special groups.

Two things, Hibbard pointed out, must be assumed in any attempt to predict the probable outcome of the present governmental policy of crop reduction and control: (1) We will continue under the regime of private property, (2) we will retain our present form of government.

States Present Policy. The present policy, Hibbard said, is to make "America self-contained." We propose to stay at home and get along with what we have, That means cutting down produc-tion, because if we don't buy from other countries they cannot buy from us. To cut production in the steel industry, for example, he said, is an easy matter. The owners can

Plan Appears Sound. To me, the CWS projects providing for study centers seems quite sound, not alone because it provides employment for many unemployed adults but because it provides equal educational opportunities for hundreds of boys and girls and young men and young women that would otherwise be deprived of education," declared

Dean Henzlik. Mr. Moritz was equally confi-dent of the scheme. "It has passed the experimental stage," he said. "Similar plans of study have been carried out, altho not with federal aid. movement was also discerned by Doctor Morton. I think that this is indicative of a like, permanent, project in the future and of an expanded education program. This is recognition on the part of the federal government that education is a method of employing people gainfully, of giving them oppor-tunities for developm nt of the intellect, of providing them with a use for their increasing leisure time, and of educating them for other profitable uses of leisure time. This is just the beginning. I believe it will eventuate into a permanent plan of this type."

Mr. Morton also pointed out that since the age limit for the employment of young people is steadily rising, some such plan is very advisable to take care of the period from graduation from high school to the time of employment. Society can't exist with its youth idie between the ages of 18 to 21
