HONOR FIRST GRADUATE

Administration and Alumni Association Arrange Celebration.

With the university administration and alumni association rapidly formulating plans, arrangements for the annual Charter Day program which is to be held on the campus next Thursday are practically complete. The main features of the celebration and recognition of the university's birthday, Feb. 15, are to be an address on "Literature and Life," given by Phyllis Bentley, famous English novelist, in the Coliseum at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, and a testimonial banquet honoring James Stuart Dales, first graduate of the university, and recently resigned corporation secretary of the board of regents. The banquet is scheduled to be held at 7 o'clock in the evening at the University club.

The concert will be presented at 3 o'clock, and is open to the public.

JOURNALISM SOCIETY MEETS ON WEDNESDAY

Theta Sigma Phi Hears Betty Segal Review Freedom Of Press Article.

A review of an article, "The 200th Anniversary of Freedom of the Press" which appeared in the Matrix was given by Betty Segal at the meeting of Theta Sigma Phi, honorary and professional journalism society, Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Ellen Smith hall.

The article told of a celebration recently held at St. Paul's church in East Chester, New York. It was on the green of this historic old church that an election was held in 1733 which led to the trial of John Peter Zenger and the ultimate struggle for freedom of the press which grew out of this trial.

Plans for a literary meeting in the near future were also discussed.

'Only Bank Credit Expansion Will Raise Price Level; Gold Standard Has Little Effect On It,' States Karl M. Arndt

"When the banks create more money by making loans, then the buying power of the bill will go up." This is the theory of Professor Arndt expressed in his lecture to the group of students in the Central Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday night.

The lecture of Professor Arndt was the first of a series of talks which are being sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. on topics of the day.

"When more money is put into the hands of the people through expansion of credit the buying power will be raised and the prices will go up. Unless more credit is given there are but two more factors that will cause the prices to go up, according to some people." He emphasized "some people" because of an edict which has been given out curbing forecasts by professors. "Because the people think that prices will go up for some vague reason connected with the devaluation of the dollar there will be a speculative enthusiasm which may send the prices upward."

"Because of the cheap dollar there will be a tendency for the price on all imports from foreign countries to go up; this rise in price will cause the imports to fall off. On the other hand because the Professor O. W. Arguing the question of the enlargement of the powers of the president, Charles Steadman and Jack Pace, varsity debaters, met William England and George Steinmetz, speakers from Iowa State college in an open debate in Social Sciences auditorium, Wednesday afternoon. There was no decision.

Nebraska on the negative side of the question attempted to limit the discussion of the topic to the conditions of presidential power under Franklin Roosevelt. However, the affirmative interpreted the proposition to proceed on the powers of the president as they had been completely outlined previous to the present administration. They argued that the power of the president of the United States should be enlarged as a permanent policy, called for any enlargement they might suggest and was not limited to the present situation.

They proceeded on this basis to offer the plan that the president should have the sole power to introduce public bills into congress, that the cabinet members should have the right to speak on the floor of congress, that the introduction of a bill could be demanded from the president by congress by

Wm. Waldo is Chairman

Production Will Be Short, Fast, and Lively, Say Skit Managers.

Rehearsal Thursday night at the student activities building for all skits entered in Coll-Agri-Fun, Ag College's annual home talent fun show, has been called by Bill Waldo, Coll-Agri-Fun committee chairman.

Initiating a new policy of fewer and better acts this year, Waldo and his committee have indicated that their show will not exceed ten acts. In past years, they said, some criticism has been that the show was too long. The show this year, they said, will be short, fast and lively.

Practically every group of students on Ag campus is preparing skits for the show Feb. 16, according to the committee. Tryouts last week indicated that the acts would have plenty of spirit and originality. "The show last year," Waldo said Wednesday, "was considered the best in Coll-Agri-Fun history. We're out to give the public a better show."

MEN MAY REGISTER FOR CHORAL UNION

One Hour Credit Is Allowed For Two Rehearsals Each Week.

Howard Kirkpatrick, of the university school of music, issues a call for men singers for the Choral union, which is one of the oldest institutions on this campus and has existed for thirty-eight years. It offers one hour credit for two mixed chorus rehearsals a week. The meetings are held in Morrill hall 220, Monday and Wednesday at 11, or Tuesday and Thursday at 3. Students may register to the end of this week without paying a late registration fee.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said, "We need more men singers. We have enough women, but most of the men are in other colleges." He expressed some indignation at other colleges which allow their students only six or eight hours of music a week. He stated, "I think that it would be an excellent thing if the colleges which now limit their electives so strictly could see their way clear to allow at least two semesters to music. For those men who can neither sing nor play an instrument, courses in music appreciation and the history of music are offered."

Mr. Kirkpatrick felt sure that if the men in other colleges knew about some of the music courses, they would support them and we would have a strong choral group.

Home Ec Graduates List Two Divorces For 380 Marriages

Miss Margaret Fedde, chairman of the Home Economics department at this university, has reason to believe that her courses tend to make business slow for the divorce courts. Only two divorces have been recorded among the 380 marriages among graduates of the department.

"We don't mention divorce in our classes," she said. "I'm not set against divorce, and at times I believe it is the only solution to some domestic problems. But we emphasize home-making and think about it definitely as a career."

Ideas among coeds as to matrimony and home-making are changing, she said. Ten years ago few girls in college went about the business systematically of preparing for marriage. Now many of them are taking courses and training with the definite idea of marriage in mind, even though the future husband may not yet be in sight, she said.

MISS PHYLLIS BENTLEY, NOTED ENGLISH AUTHOR HERE CHARTER DAY, FAMOUS FOR 'INHERITANCE' AND 'A MODERN TRAGEDY'

No meager fame is that of Miss Phyllis Bentley, famous English novelist, who will deliver the Charter day address entitled "Literature and Life" in the Coliseum next Thursday morning. Miss Bentley, who is best known as the writer of "Inheritance" and "A Modern Tragedy" was recently honored by the New York Times in that publication's weekly book review section Sunday, Feb. 4. The full page article concerning Miss Bentley was given the rare front page rating in the section which deals with the works of the most widely recognized writers of the day. The article dealing with her latest production "A Modern Tragedy" was written by Percy Hutchinson, book reviewer, and is entitled "A Novel That Clarifies Our Age."

Hutchinson declares at the start that the novel with which he deals is a "searching drama of the post-war period." It deals with the depression in England, and how it affected the dramatics personae, as Miss Bentley calls the characters in the novel are engaged in the English textile industry, and are caught in the whirl of the industrial depression. with which she has been well acquainted throughout her life, her father being Joseph E. Bentley, cloth manufacturer of Yorkshire.

"Miss Bentley knows Yorkshire," states Hutchinson, "she knows the West Riding of Yorkshire, she knows the people and industry she portrays, and, most important of all, she understands all the complex interrelations between the people and the industry. . . . her book is objectively and humanly effective."

"A Modern Tragedy" peers below the surface. . . . Today, everybody is talking economics in one guise or another. It is well, then, to have so clear, so impartial, so understanding a picture, free from anything which might be called doctrinaire, as this descendant of industrialists has put before us. "A Modern Tragedy" has profound significance for all who are struggling to understand this our so muddled present."

Miss Bentley's work, "Inheritance," was written as an epic, tracing life in one English family from several centuries ago to the time of the war, discussing and revealing tradition as the core and
