

CAMPUSOCIETY

MOST ALL THE INTEREST NOW is centered around the presentation of Ted Shawn and his dancers tomorrow night in the coliseum. Sponsored by Orchesis and the W. A. A. association, the event will begin at 8:15 and will last for about two hours. Mr. Shawn will be here all day Wednesday, when he will be entertained at a luncheon which will be open to the public. It has been several years since he has been here, the last time being about three years ago when he and Ruth St. Denis appeared here and in Omaha as the Denishawn Dancers. Thursday and Friday the dancers will appear in Omaha.

FROM THE WAY everyone was acting yesterday, last week end must have been a rather tired one for fraternities that held initiations. The Kappa Sig announce the initiation of the following men: Harry Hamner, Lincoln; Harold Tucker, Lincoln; Laverne Luedke, Stanton, and Edward Bignell, Lincoln.

NEW MEMBERS of Acacia are John Groth, Lincoln; Lewellyn Halderon, Newman Grove; Roy Kennedy, Newman Grove; Lawrence Beckman, Garland; Harold Sutter, Lincoln, and William O. Jones, Omaha.

THE ALPHA SIGS held initiation ceremonies over the week end for Charles Aldrich and Omar Vormeister of Elmwood. Douglas Halter of Lincoln, and Vance Leininger of Fullerton. An initiation banquet was held at the house after the ceremonies.

AND THE PI. K. A.'s initiated the following men Saturday: Paul Rapp of Omaha, Francis Hannar of Valentine, Don Flasnack of Omaha, and Forrest Milhan of Lincoln.

A FORMAL dinner at the house followed the Phi Psi initiation Saturday afternoon. John Gepsom, president, was toastmaster, and talks were given by Mr. Earl Reid, Jack Thompson, and Douglas Kimberman. The new initiates are Gene Franz, Friend; Bill Logan, Lincoln; Earl Reid, Torrington, Wyoming; Alfred Martin, Omaha; Donald Weimer, Omaha; Bill Moose, Omaha; Bill Christy, Omaha; John Robb, Lincoln; Bill Fradenburg, Omaha; and Bill Hamilton, Omaha.

BUT THE P. A. D.'s elected to have a breakfast in honor of their new initiates, who were taken to the fraternity at midnight last Saturday night. Sixty actives and alumnae were present at the breakfast Sunday morning. The new members are William McGuire, Lincoln; Henry Keller, Jr., Lincoln; Carroll Weberg, Denison, Iowa; Walter Stedman, Fort Worth, Texas; John Landis, Seward; Bayard Paine, Jr., Grand Island; John G. Strom, Sac City, Iowa; Homer Wiltse, Falls City.

LAST SATURDAY Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bobbitt entertained sixteen guests at a bridge tea at which time they announced the engagement of their daughter, Jean, to Loren B. Almy. April 14 has been set for the date of the wedding. Both Miss Bobbitt and Mr. Almy are graduates of the university, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Theta.

AND ALMOST four years ago Miss Harriet Whitman, former Tri Delt here, was married to Lieut. Berne Packer, Delt. The wedding took place on the 26th of April in Belleville, Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Packer are living in Decorah, Iowa.

THERE WERE 125 guests at the annual Delta Gamma banquet Saturday night at the University club. The program was the "Review of Revues" and was given by the active members. Mrs. Robert Goss was chairman of the committee in charge, which included Miss Marian Watkins, Miss Jean Spicer, Mrs. Sterling J. Memis, and Mrs. H. A. Kurtz.

AND NEXT Friday the Thetas are giving their annual banquet at the University club, for which Miss Louise Trester is making the arrangements.

HONORING the patrons of the Lincoln group of Delta Omicron, Mrs. Merlin L. Springer will entertain the alumnae and patronesses at her home this evening at 7:30. Assisting her will be Mrs. Carl Robinson, Mrs. Everett M. Sloggett, Mrs. Emma Holyoke, Mrs. August Molzer, Mrs. Harry Zeigenheim and Miss Mary Jo Rankin. The program will be presented by Wilbur Chenoweth and Oscar Bennett.

AT THE KAPPA SIG house last Sunday evening, the mothers club entertained eighty guests at a supper. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Oakley Cox and Mr. and Mrs. C. Tucker were in charge.

AT THREE o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. George M. Darlington entertained the Bizad Woman's club at her home. Assisting her was Mrs. A. B. Schmidt.

He dug a string around a tree to remember it, and came back to find the elves had tied all the trees.

Bell Spots Houses.

However, Dr. Bell of the university walks through Cass county cornfields, saying, "Here was a house, and over in that corner was another. You can see where another stood—there in that depression."

Going over to the spot of the slight "depression" the amateur fails to see why it should be picked out from the other rows of the cornfield. Yet if he looks closely he may find an arrowhead and other bits of flint. And if he digs, he is sure to find that Dr. Bell knew his Indians.

Supply of Water.

Does that sound simple? Well, it isn't. In the first place, the Indians didn't just choose any old spot for their homes. They wanted to be sure of a supply of water; they had enemies from whom they had to protect themselves; and they needed stones and flint for their tools. These things have been learned by digging into their houses. Yet no one knows who they are or where they came from or where they went.

Let's go out to Cass county and watch the digging for Indian relics. Along the flat land near Weeping Water stream east of Nehawka is the site, out in a cornfield. CWA workers have been scraping and shoveling away the blackish mixed the clay pots which have stood the strain of the centuries are smooth and tell little, except in a general way, of the life of the Indian owners. But a pot or utensil that is decorated makes the game more thrilling, for the decoration may mean that the Indian had a high culture and sense of art. More important, it may indicate the work of another tribe or region and mean to the economist that these peoples had a wide trade area.

Ted Shawn to Dance Here

Ted Shawn and three of his dancers are pictured above in a scene in "Workers' Songs," one of the dances he will present when he appears at the university coliseum Mar. 28.

With paint brush and trowel, Dr. Bell probed at the partly exposed piece of hardened clay. Around him had gathered the workers, some interested, some glad for a rest. There was a professor of economics who saw in the pottery a chance for an epoch-making discovery. There was a young student of archeology who could hardly wait to get his hands on the specimen. Dr. Bell and Dr. Gilmore were excited, too, for it might be that the pot would come out in one piece—which seldom happens. It might show them much of the life and cultural habits of this people.

But to some of the unprofessional watchers the piece of pottery meant little in itself. They thought of those Indians who had carefully molded the clay into the bowl, who had painstakingly marked the straight parallel lines on the sides. In imagination the mind could see bronzed warriors returning with antelope after a hunt, the squaws working around the great central fireplace, cooking in those pots of clay. Outside would be the men, smoking their short clay pipes in silence.

Large Pieces Remains.

The pot was broken when Dr. Bell unearthed it, there remained a large piece. Some few feet away, buried an equal distance from the surface, the archeologist came upon a two-inch bit which fitted exactly into the side of the first fragment. Once this was a large, squat bowl, with small rounded handles.

Further digging revealed many flint pieces, which had probably been quarried out of the nearby limestone cliffs along the stream. Polished bone hoes were revealed, and tools of stone. A stone pipe was found, which had some of the cake yet in the bowl, and which apparently had been smoked without a stem.

Dr. Bell believes that these Indians dug their houses several feet below the surface, then built on up with timbers and sod. Doorways are wide and always built toward the south, for here the most of the sun came in, and the cold north wind would not blow through. Over the center great posts was an opening which permitted the smoke from the fireplace to escape. Finally one day a prairie fire swept over the nearby hill and burned these homes of the ancient men.

It seems that archeologists, according to Dr. Bell, have contempt for those people whom they call pot-hunters. These are the people with a complex for collecting specimens about which they know nothing. When the pot-hunters dig up Indian specimens they quickly tuck them away on their mantelpieces to show visitors, and so, says the student of the subject, here is a page lost from the book of the culture of the Nebraska Indian.

Cass county citizens are receiving high praise from Dr. Bell because they do not belong to the genus pot-hunter. "They want to know the story and the history of their predecessors," he says. "They come out and work, sometimes 25 or 30 of them, because they wish to know and understand the earlier citizens of their country. Such spirit as they show has been a great help in furthering the University of Nebraska projects."

Judges at the farmers' fair intersorority ride last year pronounced the coed's ability in the saddle as "remarkable." Ralston said, and the girls this year will have to show some class if they outdo the riding in that contest. He remarked that several women who will enter the contest have already started some horseback riding practice.
