Dean of Student Affairs T. J. Thompson Outlines Student Job Situation; Presents Survey Results

Editor's Note: In answer to hundreds of requests asking for information about student employment and wages from persons wishing to attend the University of Nebraska the following exclusive article has been prepared by Dr. T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs at the University of Nebraska, at the request of The Sunday Nebraskan.

BY DR. T. J. THOMPSON.

Last February the federal government through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration inaugurated an employment program designed to assist other students in taking up college courses.

Incidentally, one of the most encouraging features of the employment was the fact that the students were willing and anxious to earn their allotments.

As the semester progressed and it became possible to make an appraisal of the program, it became increasingly apparent that such employment was of great benefit to needy and worthy college students.

The students were paid 30 cents per hour. They were permitted to earn from a minimum of $10 per month, according to the amount allotted them.

Propose Continuance. In the application of this employment program for the ensuing school year, the University of Nebraska proposes to continue it in much the same manner as it conducted the program during the second semester of last year.

of average $15 per month allotments from 10 per cent to 12 per cent of the student body, the number of average allotments will be increased from 454 to 645.

In addition to the employment offered by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the merchants and residents of Lincoln have always been very generous in offering employment to students.

Students desiring to attend the university, whether or not they plan to take advantage of the emergency relief employment allotments or part-time employment offered by Lincoln citizens, will quite naturally be interested in the cost involved.

While the University of Nebraska does not accept as good practice the too often used of stating minimum costs, it is quite willing to say that a student may secure the opportunities for an education here as cheaply as at another institution of like standing.

Question of Future Education Is More Difficult Than Usual for High School Graduates, Says Chancellor

"This is a time when young men and women who have graduated from high school and are eligible to enter college are doing much serious thinking about their further education," declared Chancellor E. A. Burnett, head of the university Wednesday.

"This year the question is more difficult than usual," he continued. "In addition to the question, shall I attend some college or university, are the questions of where, what college, how is the expense to be provided, is it possible to go at lower costs than formerly, can I earn a part or all of the costs as I go along, and will the advantages from such attendance be greater than the costs in money and effort."

"Education is more important than the economic problems that confront us. It is important that old and young be kept active and interested in some new endeavor. Study in college or school is one of the fine ways in which this may be done. Educational effort stimulates high endeavor, while idleness breeds discouragement and possible delinquency."

Colleges Well Equipped. "The colleges of the country and the state university at Lincoln are especially equipped to offer opportunities to young men and women who desire to pursue college work."

"There is nothing so important to the well-being of the man or woman as his right choice of an occupation," explained the chancellor. "At Nebraska, with its hundreds of faculty members, large number of classroom buildings, and libraries, the student has a very broad field from which to select his line of study. He is not restricted to one particular course."

Broad Training. He explained that at the university if the entering student is undecided about his life vocation he may enter the college of arts and sciences where he will get a broad general training, useful in any profession he may care to enter. High school graduates may also
