

Cornhuskers Viewed In Action Against the Cowboys

(1) One of the few passes which McDonald (35) could not reach. He scored two touchdowns on forward passes.
 (2) Here is Nebraska's Johnny Williams about to take a pass out of the hands of two of Wyoming's backs. Johnny can play any position on the team and plays it well.
 (3) The "flea-flicker" or double pass, with Cardwell receiving the forward pass and about to relay the pass to Williams. This was the play Minnesota used to defeat Nebraska two years ago.
 (4) This was a long forward pass to McDonald which was short. He tried valiantly to scoop it up before it touched the ground but failed. Had the pass been completed it would have been another touchdown as he was yards from the nearest opponent with a clear field to the goal.
 (5) McDonald snags a pass in the end zone for one of Nebraska's first touchdowns. It was a long pass and McDonald caught it over his shoulder on the dead run.
 (6) Benson sweeps his own right end with fine interference. Husker Game Captain Pflum is the large lad in the foreground.

PATTERSON TO DEFINE TRUTH IN YM LECTURE

Open Forum Scheduled in Temple Wednesday Evening.

"What is truth" is the title of the address that Dr. C. H. Patterson of the philosophy department will give Wednesday evening at 7:15 in the Y. M. C. A. club room in the Temple.

In a test, Dr. Patterson asked one of his philosophy classes to name the problem that puzzled them most in life. The question that emerged as the most enigmatic was "What is truth?" Consequently, Dr. Patterson will attempt to answer this question in his talk, with special reference to moral standards. He will also include advice as to how students can glean the truth from the confusion of statements, viewpoints, and standards on the campus.

This meeting being the regular Wednesday night open forum, to which all students are invited, an informal discussion will follow the main address.

Fifty-five men attended the first meeting held last week, and, according to Charles Hulac, Y president, a larger number is expected to turn out to hear Dr. Patterson.

Dr. Herbert A. Miller, noted sociologist who was ousted two years ago from Ohio State university for his advanced social theories, has been appointed professor of political and social economy at Bryn Mawr college.

A "weariness of popular cynicism and sophistication in university circles signals a definite turn in the tide of spiritual affairs in American colleges," according to Bishop Ira D. Warner of the United Brethren church.

SOCCER BALL IS FIRST INTRAMURAL TOURNEY

Sorority, Barb Teams Begin Practice for Contest Thursday, Oct. 4.

Sorority and barb teams are practicing afternoons and evenings in preparation for the soccer-baseball tournament, first of the intramural sports for women, which will start Thursday, Oct. 4. Elaine Fontein, soccer-baseball sponsor of the W.A.A., will have direct charge of the first tournament in this year's intramural program.

Girls majoring in physical education will act as umpires in the tournament games, and mimeographed copies of the rules may be secured by the intramural representative from each sorority or barb team. Before participating in any of the sports each girl must secure a health permit.

Miss Matilda Shelby is the new W.A.A. intramural sports sponsor. Miss Shelby came to the university this summer when she taught swimming and tennis in summer school. She was graduated from Northwestern university, and has had charge of intramural sports at Knox college, Galesburg, Ill., and at Ames, Iowa.

Another change in the W.A.A. officials is the replacement of Christobel Weaver, former extension chairman on the executive

Steve Epler's Six Man Football Team May Solve Small School Grid Problem

By Lloyd Hendricks.

Long has it been the cry of the smaller schools throughout the state that something should be done about cutting the expense of football. The latest trend in this direction is the six-man football program worked out by Steve Epler, assistant coach at Beatrice, high school, and according to officials this form of football will prove of special interest to many coaches now enrolled at Nebraska.

Last week this new game made its debut at Hebron in a game played under the lights by four picked teams. In order to show up the game it was tried twice in the same night with satisfactory results in both cases.

May Add One Man to Team.
 The first game between Beatrice and Hebron Academy ended in a scoreless tie, while the night-cap final found Holyoke and Alexandria in a 19-19 tie with a Chester-Hardy aggregation. Epler, enthused after viewing the first game, said he thought it might be a good plan to add one man to each team. This would consist of a five-man line and two-man backfield on defense and a four and three set-up for offense.

There has always been a crying need for a football program which small towns throughout the state can afford and still be rewarded by good attendance records. Over 1,000 persons viewed the first set to at Hebron.

Notable among its advantages was the reduction of injuries. The officials were over-joyed at the prospects of the game. Only a few penalties were called and there was no digging around among the players to recover the ball.

The chief innovations of the game are: Every man except the center is eligible for a pass; the ball cannot be advanced over the line of scrimmage until after at least a two-yard pass has been completed; and punts replace placekicks in the kickoff.

Makes More Versatile Players.
 Ed Higginbotham of Beatrice applauded the performance and said the new game makes it necessary for each player to be about three times as versatile as a member of the orthodox eleven. He added that "midget" footballers will have to concentrate on interference and that it should soon be accorded intramural competition.

The game seems to have met with the approval of this section of the country and several Kansas schools are busy organizing six-man teams.

Coaches Agree Game Worthwhile.
 Epler conceived the idea when as an assistant coach at Beatrice high school he found that many men out for the squad were never given a chance under actual firing-line conditions. By a careful study of various sand-lot football rules which were in predominance around athletically minded neighborhoods at Beatrice he formulated a set of rules for his six-man enterprise.

Coaches are agreed in their opinion that he has found something worthwhile. Hal Bowers of Lincoln is quoted as saying the game is exciting to watch and has all the thrills of a regular game less the hazards.

Coaches throughout the state must have a meeting in order to decide whether to include the new sport in intramural sport activities. While there has been no action as yet on the part of the Nebraska State High School Athletic association Coach Epler is satisfied that it will become a part of the athletic program for every small high school in the state before two years. He advises that student coaches now enrolled in state universities and normal schools, study the game and become well acquainted with its details in order that they may promote it when they assume positions as coaches.

With the apparent demise of the Cornsack upon us, the responsibility for the University of Nebraska spirit (in hushed tones) now rests solely upon the capable shoulders of Louise Hosack, leader of the Tassels. Louise has already proven beyond all shadow of a doubt that personal brilliance and grandstand play are not always as effective as steady plugging. While this may appear in the nature of a backhand compliment, I really think that all credit is due to any girl who could undertake such a responsible position under the cloud of being suspected of election through political wire-pulling, rather than merit, and carry it thru to a glowing, if not a flaming finish.

The Tassels situation leads us to comment on the apparent desertion of several of the more prominent Tassels with the beginning of this year, and, incidentally, after the Spring honorary elections were over. This would be likened to rats deserting a sinking ship, except for the fact that the Tassel ship has no indications of sinking. While all women's organizations are prone to become political vehicles, with direct routes to Mortar Board, it would be very advisable for the successful passengers not to disembark as soon as their destination is reached.

At any rate, the Tassels are coming, which always makes me want to add, "Yo-Ho, Yo-Ho."

One of the better looking of the new fall outfits is Mary Helen Davis' gray angora. It's made very simple, and is trimmed with big cone shaped glass buttons, which are the color of the best strawberry jam. Polly Pollard also sports a new dress. A two-piece effect, with brown wool skirt, and yellow and brown plaid top. The whole thing is very effective with Polly's dark hair.

Science itself is now discarding the Newtonian concepts. Economics is becoming humanized. But education continues to devote its energies to gathering facts and is scornful of "mere opinion."—Dr. James F. Hoxic, professor of education at Columbia.
