An Invitation To Students' Dads.

ON Saturday, Oct. 27, dads of university students will be visiting the campus, many of them alumni of the institution coming back to the grounds to review college days and memories with old buddies, and those who aren't alumni surveying with interest the school their children are attending. Every year Innocents society plans a Dad's day celebration that includes a luncheon, football game, and a dance.
Innocents society and The Daily Nebraskan, in welcoming fathers to the campus for next week-end's gathering, are sending this issue of the publication to dads so they will have some advance information concerning the special day, thus being enabled to plan attendance at the function.
It is important that parents of students become acquainted with the university, its facilities, purposes, and the lives of their children who are attending the school. The central point of the program is the symbolism. Parents and children don't often understand one another well enough, and in all too many instances the home ties are broken as soon as the young man or woman comes from his or her home to start a university career. Dad's Day represents the rebinding of home ties.
This year Innocents society Dad's Day committee is planning a program that should appeal to all visiting parents. It is at the luncheon where dads and children will get together. An enthusiastic university alumnus has been secured as speaker for the day, and it is assured that he will deliver a short, peppy, and truly Nebraskan speech. Too often there is more sentiment of an embarrassing sort than man to man friendliness. The Dad's Day committee this year is attempting to arrange a luncheon program unusual because of the last characteristic. In the afternoon, immediately following the luncheon, comes the Iowa State-Nebraska football game in Memorial stadium, and if ratings of the present moment mean anything the tilt should be a thriller.

It is sincerely hoped that dads find it possible to visit the campus that day, Saturday, Oct. 27, and the student body assures them of a warm welcome.

Know the Facts!

This campus' current controversy on compulsory military drill has been featured by many arguments and expressions of beliefs based on erroneous propaganda and falsification. There has been considerable doubt as to what is true and what is untrue. Opponents of the move to abolish compulsory military drill in favor of optional drill on this campus continue to fight the move on grounds that if it were made the university would lose federal land grant funds. It was pointed out in these columns Tuesday that no such loss would be involved.
To those fearing such developments the Nebraskan says, "Know the facts!" The above contention was refuted in the Tuesday editorial entitled "Compulsory Drill Must Go."
Following are some of the facts upon which the doubtful and skeptical should be enlightened:

- 1—The editor of the Nebraskan asks the substitution of optional military drill in place of the compulsory course that now exists.
- 2—The editor of the Nebraskan has no personal resentment against any departmental staff member of the local R. O. T. C. unit, nor does he hold any grudge against any student officers.
- 3—Any space that advocates of compulsory military drill and particularly officials in the military department wish to use we gladly offer. It is desirable that both sides of the question be voiced in these columns.
- 4—If optional drill were substituted in place of compulsory training there would be no loss of federal funds. Below is proof:
The University of Wisconsin, a Land Grant college, abolished compulsory drill in 1922, and suffered no diminution of federal appropriations. In connection with this case the Secretary of the Interior wrote on July 19, 1923:
"According to the act approved July 2, 1862, it is clear that the branches of instruction which include military tactics, are to be taught in such manner as the legislatures of the states may respectively prescribe—Military training according to the federal law is clearly placed in the same category as other branches of learning which are named. Instruction in military tactics is obviously a requirement on the states as are the other branches which are mentioned. It does not appear, however, from the federal legislation that instruction in military tactics is any more obligatory on the individual student than is instruction in agriculture or mechanic arts."
The attorney general sustained the decision of the secretary of the interior at that time in declaring that military training is not compulsory in Land Grant colleges under the Morrill act.
Let's forget this money bugbear and argue on the logical merits and points of the case.

CHANTS

BY CHANCE.
Tid bits . . . Don Friedly of the back stage Friedlys over in the drama department, is scouring the countryside for a pair of Venetian Blinds, stabs to most people, to use in the second act of the new play. Stipulated colors are not necessary, so any persons having a pair to loan, will be royally welcomed by Mr. Friedly.

Dog days are here again, at least around the campus. Yesterday Lochinvar, usually known as "Little Jock" made his appearance under the chaperonage of his mistress, Margaret Straub. "Big Jock" is still "house-guesting" with Polly Gellatly and the two Scotties enjoy sojourning around the campus immensely.

The cast for the new play is an entirely new one with the exception of Armand Hunter. "The type of work Armand did in the last show is the exact opposite this time, as he has turned from drama to comedy. He will be the 'funny man' in this show, which is a comedy with a farcical situation in it," said Director Pete Sumption. The play, "Her Master's Voice," is by Clare Kummer, the author of "Good Gracious Annabel" and "What Ann Brought Home."

"The Prologue," official program of the University Players, will be made up hereafter under the direction of Ralph L. Reeder, assistant in the University News and Feature Service. It will be an eight page publication, after the style of the official theater program, "The Play-Goer." News stories, gossip and coming attractions about the play, the players and other plays planned will be in the new program.

NEBRASKA GRID FANS PLAN RALLY FRIDAY

"Since this is our first conference game away from home, spirit will mean a lot to the team, and it's the duty of the student body to provide it.
Coach Bible, Game Captain Skewes, and several members of the squad will be asked to give short talks to the crowd from the steps of the train.
"The Tassels will be at the station in full membership," Louise Hossack, president of the group, predicted. "We are anxious to have the largest possible crowd at the demonstration to show that students are behind the team off their home field."

by the Pittsburgh game. She hoped that there would be a large number of entries in the competition.
Walter Erickson, president of the contest, smiled on his pipe and observed: "The contest is commendable in its recognition of a long felt need of a victory song worthy of the reputation and prestige which the Cornhusker teams have brought to Nebraska."
It seems that everyone is ready for a new song which is not, as Dick Schmidt, Daily Nebraskan business manager, remarked, "a crowd song." Student aid in competition is now the necessary ingredient for making the new song upon which so great expectations are pinned, it was indicated by the Innocents.

to the game with the Nebraskan. The brilliant backfield of the Cornhuskers are ready to spring a bewildering bag of tricks," stated Miss Faith Arnold, coach of the Cornhusker team.
Nebraskan editors expressed confidence that their team would win an easy victory. "We expect to loose a dazzling, baffling, deceptive offensive onslaught which will completely demoralize the yearbook peddlers," said Lamoine Bible, managing editor.
Eugene Foster, Cornhusker half, declared, "With an increase of Cornhusker personnel we are confident of unopposed victory."
Burton Marvin, editor of the Nebraskan, said, "The staff positively refuses extension of goal lines or deadlines, practices customarily resorted to by yearbook staffs."
Maynard Miller, business manager of the Cornhusker, stated, "We've had light practices and we're not very worried about the outcome of the game."
The question as to the victor, which has been raging for some time, will be definitely settled at Friday's game which has been formerly scheduled for October 12.

You speak into the telephone. Your voice, your personality, part of you is projected far and wide. In effect you are in two places and times at once—even in New York, afternoon in San Francisco. Or you're in Washington today and in Sydney, Australia tomorrow—at one and the same time!

The telephone's power to put a person where he wants to be—at the psychological moment—proves tremendously valuable. In domestic and foreign business, in national and international affairs, in friendly social contacts, it permits a quick interchange of ideas and immediate understanding.
