Debate Held by Young Political Groups Oct. 24

With enthusiastic support from a large audience, debate teams of young democrats and young republicans debated their liberties under the New Deal at a meeting sponsored by the two Lancaster clubs held in the Cornhusker ballroom Wednesday evening.

Irving Hill and James Gleason representing the democrats denied that Americans are forfeiting their liberties under the present administration while the republican debaters, Lee Rankin and Russell Mattson declared that constitutional rights of the people are being taken from them.

Mattson in his opening speech stated that constitutional rights of the people are being taken over by delegated governmental authorities and that the NRA and AAA are direct violations of the constitution. In replying Hill emphasized that no rights had been taken, but had only been used by the president with the consent of congress to satisfy the crying need of the mass of the people for action.

Rankin denied the democratic policy of taking property without due process of law under the gold revaluation plan and declared the rights of trial by jury should not be taken over by a governmental board of the NRA. To uphold his opinions he quoted cases in which these rights were denied. He also explained that the employment situation was not improved by bureaucratic acts of the administration.

Gleason in sharp rejoinders pointed out the benefits to the people in the elimination of unbearable conditions and the good accomplished by the party he defended.

"If the small business man treats his employees in a humane way and pays them a living wage under workable conditions, he need have no fear of being crushed by the new deal," Gleason summed up in his remarks. "If former administrators have taxed thru controlled tariffs," he demanded in reply to the accusation of delegated taxing power, "why can't the present administration do the same in bringing recovery?"

Nebraska's Only Korean Student Believes Native Schools on Par With United States Institutions

When asked what he thought of the United States after six years here, Hugh Choy, the only Korean student at the university stated laughingly in American vernacular, "I think two-bits for food would go farther now on a day coach from San Francisco to Huron than it did six years ago."

Since his entrance into this country in 1928, Mr. Choy has mastered English, learned to play tennis and the saxophone, and worked in the Homestead gold mine of South Dakota and in Yellowstone Park. He also spent three years at Huron college in South Dakota. It was after he had been sent back to China from Seattle by immigration officials and then made the twenty day return trip to the port of San Francisco where he was again delayed by immigration red tape that Choy's finances were reduced to two dimes and a nickel.

Mr. Choy's story, which is a mixture of oriental and American experience, revealed much of the customs and conditions in Korea today. He is studying animal husbandry at the university because he believes that Korea as well as Japan and China are deficient in their knowledge of livestock. He stated that although these Oriental farmers each have one cow, dairy products such as butter and cheese are unknown. Their specialty is hand planted rice with scattered crops of wheat, barley, soy beans, tobacco and cotton. After he finishes his course, Mr. Choy plans to return to Korea and introduce there some of the American methods.

The luncheon will be held on the west balcony of the C. O. C., and a few remarks will be made by President Cowmie.

BURKE-SIMMONS WILL DEBATE FRIDAY NIGHT

Students May Attend Clash Scheduled to Be Held in Coliseum.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED

Climaxing the weeks political activities on the campus, the Burke-Simmons debate to be held in the coliseum Friday evening at 8 o'clock, will be the seventh in a series of ten oral battles the two senatorial candidates have been waging over the state for the past month.

University students as well as the general public will be able to attend the debate in the coliseum thru special arrangements with the Nebraska State Teachers association who relinquish their rights to the building that evening. Capacity crowds have listened to the arguments of the candidates in earlier meetings in the series and sponsors expect a large audience.

A return to old campaign methods of personal debate gives voters and students of political science an excellent opportunity to study the candidates at first hand and learn their views, several local students of government pointed out.

C. L. Clark and H. A. Spencer representing the democratic and republican state committees will preside at the Burke-Simmons debate.

All students are invited to attend the affair, which has been recommended by many members of the faculty as an excellent way of getting a bird's eye view of the political set-up in the United States today.

NORTON SPEAKS ON UNICAMERAL SYSTEM TODAY

Former Congressman to Talk in Temple This Morning At Convocation.

PLAN DEFEATED ONCE

Address to Concern Changes That New Amendment Would Bring.

Members of the university will have an opportunity to hear an advocate of the proposed one house legislature amendment, when John N. Norton, former Polk, Neb., congressman and graduate of the university, speaks at a convocation this morning at 11 o'clock in the Temple theater.

Mr. Norton was a member of the legislature in 1913 when that body went on record as favoring the unicameral system, and a member of the constitutional convention in 1920 when the measure came up for discussion and would have been submitted to the people but was defeated by a tie vote.

The speaker, who has been connected with the agriculture adjustment administration during the past two years, is campaigning for the amendment at the present time and will discuss the changes that the system would bring about.

Among other things the plan proposes that the state legislature be composed of one house of from 30 to 50 members, rather than the present senate and house of representatives, of 33 and 100 members respectively.

Concerning the new plan, Dr. Harold W. Stoke of the political science department remarked, "Efforts to simplify governmental machinery are greatly needed, since such simplicity usually encourages a greater sense of responsibility on the part of public officials. This is such an effort and should be seriously considered."

Dr. J. P. Senning chairman of the political science department in commenting upon the convocation said, "The constitutional amendment proposing a one house legislature instead of the present two house system, is of the utmost importance to the people of the state. It is being widely debated all over the state by those sponsoring it as well as those who oppose it. The members of the university will have an opportunity to hear one of the ablest debaters on either side at the assembly this morning. The issues involved are of a nature that everyone who has a vote should attempt to get a thorough understanding of the changes involved in order to cast an intelligent vote."

Mr. Norton is well equipped to speak on the topic in view of the propaganda that is being circulated by both sides and it would be profitable to hear him," was the statement of Dr. L. W. Lancaster, also of the political science department.

Dugan, who was driving, stated that the car struck a puddle of mud on the approach to the bridge and skidded into a deep rut, causing him to lose control of the car. It went through the guard railing of the bridge and dropped about twenty feet into the creek bed below.

TRYOUTS FOR VARSITY DEBATE SET FOR NOV. 1

Men Wishing to Participate Must Enter Names by Monday.

EIGHT MINUTE SPEECHES

Men wishing to try out for the varsity debate team must have entered their names with Professor White by Monday morning, Oct. 29, according to an announcement Wednesday from the debate office. Tryouts will be held Nov. 1, and any man who has been in school at least one year is eligible. Drawings for sides will be made after the names are in, and these will be announced on Tuesday, Oct. 31.

According to Professor White each contestant will be allowed a speech of eight minutes before the judges, who will be former debaters and men experienced in judging. Contestants will organize their own case as they think suitable and divide their eight minutes into both constructive and rebuttal in any way they desire. The judges will choose those who are best in the collection, organization, and presentation of material, taking into consideration both the evidence itself and the ability in speaking.

The debate coach urges that those who expect to compete read the references on file in the reserve room of the library. Bibliographies are posted on the bulletin boards, may be obtained at 1111 Andrews Hall, or may be consulted in the reference room of the library.

The season's first debate will be at Kansas State, Dec. 8, on the subject: "Resolved: That the federal government should adopt the policy of equalizing educational opportunities through the nation by means of annual grants to the several states for public elementary and secondary education." Other debates, on both the negative and positive sides of the above proposition will be scheduled in the next month, these to be held either in the middle of December or in the early weeks of the new year.

Other subjects to be debated this season are the agricultural relief plans of the government and states, and the Pi Kappa Delta subject of limiting the exportation of arms and ammunition.

According to White, varsity debate promises to be more popular this year than ever before. The number of contestants for the team is expected to show a considerable increase, as interest in the activity has been evidenced to a marked degree. Names of contestants will be announced Monday.

School of Music Presents Third Musical Oct. 24

By Chance.

Under the auspices of the university school of music, the third musical convocation was presented Wednesday in the temple theater with Prof. Herbert Schmidt, pianist, as the artist. These programs are given every Wednesday at 4 o'clock, and the public as well as the student body is invited.

Opening the program was Beethoven's well known "Sonata Appassionata, Opus 57." In three parts, "Allegro assai," "Andante con moto" and "Allegro ma non troppo," this delightful sonata was unusually well received, and the artist was recalled.

In seven parts, "Impromptu-Scherzino - Waltzer - Phantasms-Ländler-Romance and Elfe Fantasy" Schumann's "Album-Leaves, Opus 124," also received an enthusiastic reception. This unique composition is seldom played by concert artists due to the difficult arrangements. Another Schumann selection, well selected and widely played, was the saucy "Novelletto, D Major, Opus 21, No. 2." This selection also merited a recall by the artist.

Three short selections, Medtner's "Lied and No. 1," "Sarabande" and "Toccata," both by Debussy, closed the program. The last encore was Grainger's "Sea Chanty." With the presentation of this convocation, one of the most outstanding thus far was given. Mr. Schmidt is a member of the faculty at the school of music. He has been a student at New York and Philadelphia and has done extensive concert work.
