

HUSKERS TURN ATTENTION TO KANSAS BATTLE

Jayhawks Only Gridsters to Outdown and Outyard Iowa State.

JAYS HAVE HEAVY LINE

Hargiss Eleven Steamed to Knock Nebraska Off Top Perch.

With their intersectional and inter-conference games definitely behind them for the 1934 season, Nebraska Cornhuskers now will turn full steam ahead to the task of retaining their Big Six championship laurels, and, more particularly to beating Kansas university at Lawrence next Saturday.

The Husker schedule is clear so far as the "giants" of the nation are concerned, but the two "big uns," Minnesota and Pittsburgh, left their marks on the Scarlet banner. But with the Pitt Panthers behind them as the big trippers of the season, the Huskers will devote all their spare moments thinking up ways and means to knock off Kansas, Missouri (which shouldn't require a great deal of thinking), and Kansas State.

Kansas State stride beside the Huskers for the loop lead, two victories and no defeats, but it is Kansas, girded for their first victory since 1896 and pointing for the Huskers as the target for their heaviest offensive and defensive artillery who is worrying the Husker coaching staff right now.

The Jayhawks are far from being a weak sister. The Huskers will enter the game outweighted and outexperienced by Bill Hargiss' grid pupils, but the Scarlet has grown accustomed to entering the game on the short end of the weight and veterans.

Kansas started shakily, but has improved rapidly. After a scoreless tie with Colorado, they lost to Tulsa, 7 to 0, and broke into the win column on a 34 to 12 over St. Benedicts. Kansas State won at Manhattan, 13 to 0, then came a 7 to 7 deadlock with Oklahoma and a scoreless tie with Iowa State's Cyclones.

Comparative scores seem to favor the Cornhuskers over their old enemies but a very small margin, and grid students are quite likely to disregard comparative scores when estimates of a team's prowess are made. But while Kansas tied Oklahoma 7 to 7, Nebraska won over the Sooners 6 to 0. The Jayhawks earned their tie in a final quarter spurt and trick play, although they were outplayed. Nebraska outyarded and outdowned Oklahoma, but only after the hard running Sooner backs had thrown a violet scare into the Huskers during the first half. Kansas tied Iowa State's raging Cyclones, 0 to 0, and did what no team had done to that date, outplayed their opponents. Altho Nebraska scored a 7 to 6 win in Memorial stadium, they did not gain more yards nor did they make more first downs than did the Cyclones. In fact, the Veenkermen stormed their way thru to outplay the Huskers by a very small margin.

Nebraska has usually had the "Indian sign" on Kansas on the Mt. Oread turf. Also in Memorial stadium in Lincoln, for that matter, for it was way back in 1896 that Kansas scored its last victory over Nebraska's Scarlet and Cream. They got a 20 to 20 tie in 1920 and a scoreless deadlock in 1923, but that has been the sum total of the Jayhawks' efforts against Nebraska.

In 1934, however, Bill Hargiss is preparing his Jays to meet the Huskers in much the same manner that the Cornhuskers prepared for Pitt. If only Kansas can knock Nebraska off its perch at the top of the conference ladder, their season will be a success, or so reason the Jayhawk enthusiasts. Nebraska, on the other hand, can just about cinch its claim to a fourth successive league title by taking the measure of the Jayhawks, and the Cornhuskers aren't going to miss any chances to make good their claims.

W.A.A. AWARDS 3 HIGH SALESWOMEN PRIZES

Three girls received prizes as W. A. A. saleswomen at the Pittsburgh game. Iris Knox won the first prize, Eunice Werner placed second, and Maize Foreman was third.

According to Elizabeth Busbee, concessions manager, the added number of saleswomen aided materially in serving the spectators at the game. All those who sold are urged to continue during the season.

The New England International Relations conference was held at Wellesley college (Mass.) recently. There are 492 active clubs in the United States at the present time.

SPORTSING

By LLOYD HENDRICKS

One man on Nebraska's team redeemed himself Saturday. That man was Ray Toman. Getting into the game a little late he made up for his absence by grabbing a pass and ploughing over the goal line. Toman has been a consistent performer on the varsity this year. It is his second year of football, but this spring will be the beginning of his third year as a veteran high jumper for the Cornhusker track squad.

He was one man that showed he had a fine fighting spirit. When he went up in the air after that pass there was no doubt in the minds of the onlookers. It was a sure fact that it would be a completed pass judging from the way Toman went up in the air for it and set his hands down hard on the pill.

Advance notices from Southern California indicate that the versatile "Cotton" Warburton has been supplanted as the spark plug of the Trojan attack by Dave Davis, who is rated as one of the best ball carriers on the coast.

Playing American-style football for the first season, University of Manitoba gridsters, coached by Walter Hass and Walter Ohde, former University of Minnesota players, wound up their schedule of five games with one victory and four losses. Another case of players from a well coached team going haywire when they themselves take the field as coaches.

Nebraska is at least ahead of Southern California in more ways than one. Here at Nebraska a fine intramural touch football campaign is rounding out to a finish. The California Daily Trojan has this to say of an attempt to start the practice on the sunny slope:

"A great deal of interest is being shown in the attempt to start an interfraternity touch football league. This is a great idea and it will give some of those who are not physically fit for varsity football a chance to get out and get some exercise."

The Iowa State rifle team, practicing for telegraphic meets for the past week, is not terminating preliminary practices before the opening of the regular season. The highest score so far was a total of 297 out of a possible 300 by James Butterworth. Pfeiffer's 97 in the kneeling position was the outstanding feature of the meet and won for him the weekly rifle club prize.

While we run out of things to say we might as well tell the case of Leo Ayers. Leo went to Lincoln high school and started there as a track man in the pole vault. He also did some football playing. Then he forsook going to Nebraska to go out to the coast. There he played with the Southern California Trojans. After a year's competition out there he came back and enrolled at Kansas State. Now he is the big noise down there.

Last week when Kansas State played Missouri it was Mr. Ayers that accounted for two of the touchdowns against the Tigers. It seems that Nebraska may have lost out on a good football player when young Ayers did not enroll in his home state university.

Forty colorful years of gridiron history lie behind Nebraska's Saturday engagement at Lawrence with the Kansas Jays. This rivalry, glorious with the memories of many great players of former years, is the oldest of Cornhusker football, having begun in 1892 with 1904 and '05 omitted.

During these years, Nebraska has won 29 games while piling up a total of 592 points, and the Jayhawks have won nine with a total of 229 points. Two were tie games.

Ad Lindsey's eleven stands as a wrecker of Big Six titular hopes this fall, lodged in fifth place after a slow start. The Mt. Oread lads will hold a weight advantage over the Huskers. The Jays tied Oklahoma 7 to 7 and fought to a scoreless tie with Iowa State in one of the outstanding games of the loop this fall.

Oklahoma, opening its Big Six campaign under the handicap of blatant early season ballyhoo about a wonder team, has come along hard and fast since bowing 6 to 0 to Nebraska. Kansas imposed a tie to place the Sooners in a tie for third place with Iowa State, and that affair was settled Saturday to the tune of 12 to 0 as the Norman machine rolled into third place. This week Oklahoma faces Kansas State, undefeated with two wins in the conference, and a victory over the Wildcats would mean a nice second berth behind Nebraska with some chance of a tie for first place should Missouri or Kansas State trip the Bible crew.

The most important cash in the conference Saturday was Oklahoma's 12 to 0 victory over the Cyclones at Norman. Nig Robertson and Benny Poyner, shielded by excellent blocking, romped to two touchdowns in the first quarter. The Sooners piled up 222 yards from scrimmage to Ames' 41, and made nine first downs while yielding only ytwo.

Sports writers of the nation chuckled once more Saturday as they sought unused phrases to describe the plight of Missouri's once proud Tiger. The appellation appears to be a misnomer this fall, and Kansas State added a 29 to 0 humiliation to the books at Manhattan Saturday. Stoner and Ayres did the dirty work.

Lack of a scoring punch and one disastrous quarter sent the Washington university Bears to the showers in St. Louis Saturday on the short end of a 13 to 0 verdict in an argument with Kansas. Hapgood, Jayhawk quarterback, took advantage of the one bad quarter to score twice, and then the Jays spent the rest of the day holding the St. Louis eleven, which gained 378 yards from scrimmage while yielding only 172.
