PLAYERS SCORE IN 'YELLOW JACK' OPENING MONDAY

Brilliant Drama at Temple.

Historical Fight With Yellow Fever.

BY MEREDITH OVERPECK.

"For Yellow Jack is not only a profoundly moving piece of work, but a play of extraordinary signifi-cance," wrote Brooks Atkinson, critic of the New York Times after reviewing a performance of Sidney Howard's epochal produc-tion "Yellow Jack." This play, a historical drama in two acts and twenty-nine scenes, opened for a week's engagement at the Temple theater Monday evening before an enthusiastic audience. Howard's brilliant play was dramatized from a chapter in Paul de Kruif's book, "Microbe Hunters." Harold "Pete" Sumption staged the local presen-

One of the characteristics which made this play out of the ordinary was the way in which the time moved backward and showed his-tory in the making. The first scene is in 1929 in a London laboratory and scientists are seen working on a vaccine for yellow fever. In 1927, it had already been found that the Rhesus monkey will contract the disease, so the play moves back-ward to an office in West Africa.

Cuban Scenes. The scenes which follow, take place in Cuba, where Dr. Walter Reed had been sent in 1900 by the war department to find a cause and cure for the malaria, called "yellow jack." In the course of the experiments, it develops that the mosquito carries the germ from human to human, and the action of the play centers around the various scientists, doctors and soldiers of the camp.

The action of the play is swift, and the heroic fight made by those men of yesterday, is ably portrayed in this play. All the costumes of the soldiers in the Cuban Jean Nelson are the candidates for cenes are during the Spanish American war period. One of the
