

SENIORS SELECT BAND FOR DANCE

"Musical Skippers" Play for Class Organization Party to Be Held Friday Afternoon at Carrie Belle Raymond Hall.

ERICKSON REPLACES MARVIN ON COMMITTEE

Violet Cross, Jack Fischer Urge Members Class of 1935 to Support Affair; to Name Fifty Women on Hostess Group.

With selection of an orchestra and completion of most of the final details, arrangements for the senior party, which is to be held Friday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock at Carrie Belle Raymond hall, entered its final stages at the meeting of the senior organization committee held Monday at 5 o'clock in the Student council office.

A ten piece band, called the Musical Skippers has been obtained to furnish the music for the dance, the same orchestra that played for the R.O.T.C. affair held recently. Violet Cross arranged for it through the help of Billy Quick, director of the university band. It was also decided at the meeting that refreshments will be served and that about fifty senior women will be chosen by the committee to act as hostesses for the affair. A list of those selected will be announced soon, it was decided. In addition, chaperons will be named Tuesday or Wednesday.

Due to the continued illness of Burton Marvin, a member of the committee, the members selected Wilbur Erickson, president of the Barb council to serve in his place. A discussion was held concerning the attitude of the seniors to the approaching affair, and the committee came to the conclusion that there was no reason why their classmates should not fully support the dance. Jack Fischer, president of Student council, declared, "Most of the senior men have a sense of false sophistication which they allow to prejudice them against affairs such as this senior party at which they get together with the other members of their class. There is absolutely no reason for such a foolish attitude. I think it is silly for the senior girls to hesitate in coming to the party," stated Miss Cross. "After (Continued on Page 3).

RAMSAY, BAILEY SCORE HIT IN NEW BALLARD COMEDY

University Players Open In "My Lucky Star" Monday Night.

SCENE LAID IN NEBRASKA

Temple Theater Showing World Premier of Production.

Orchids to Ray Ramsay and Art Bailey! Once again Mr. Ramsay comes through in a University Players smash hit. He usually plays one comedy a year. The audience which witnessed the opening last evening of "My Lucky Star" at the Temple theater, agreed it was a brilliant success and an opening comparable to the most excellent.

Fred Ballard, graduate of this university and an American playwright, wrote "My Lucky Star," which has its setting in a mythical Nebraska town, River City. Not only was the opening Monday evening the first night for the Players in this latest vehicle, but it also marked the world premier of Ballard's play.

As the hero, "Eggleston Sterns," affectionately called "Eggs," Ray Ramsay was a panic. Well known to local audiences this prominent alum, met with enthusiastic success. Mary Dean was seen as "Carrie," a typical overworked wife of a lazy fellow, who had to take in sewing in order to keep the wolf from the door. Her mother, "Grandma White" was a typical little old lady played by Harriet Leason. Her character make-up was exceptionally good. Art Bailey, cast as "Bud Mc- (Continued on Page 2.)

Vraz Shows Error in Modern Impression of Bohemian Race

With the passage of time, the old picture of the Bohemian as a poor, idealistic but loose living dreamer of the Parisian Montmartre or of Greenwich village, New York, is fading to join the ghosts of other departed fancies," says Professor Vraz of the business administration department. Professor Vraz was the one-time editor of the largest Czechoslovakian newspaper in the United States, with its headquarters at Northwestern university, Chicago, and he has been intensely interested in the interpretation given his country, Czechoslovakia is synonymous with Bohemia. But the term Bohemian is not related to either.

Professor Vraz explains the error. Gypsies thought to have migrated from Egypt or India, traveled to the central and western sections of Europe in the beginning of the 15th century. They were persecuted on their way and as they passed through Bohemia, the king put the Bohemian seal on their palms to insure their safety through his country. When they arrived in France, they were asked from whence they had come, and not understanding the language, they showed the seals, and were (Continued on Page 4).

COUNCIL MAY RENEW BIG SIX CONVENTIONS

Fischer Reveals Move to Renew Student Government Conventions; Nebraska Will Be Host if No Other Schools Bid.

COMMITTEE CONTACTS SCHOOLS WITH LETTERS

Conference Would Discuss Mutual Problems—Class Organization, Used Book Exchanges, Faculty Relations, Chaperons.

First steps toward resumption of the Big Six student council convention have been taken by the Nebraska council with the dispatching of letters on the matter to other Big Six schools. Dick Fischer, chairman of the council committee on the proposed conference, revealed Monday. Attitudes of other Big Six schools toward such a meeting are not yet known, Fischer said, but added that answers are expected from all of them this week.

Decision of the council to take the initiative in interesting Big Six schools in such a meeting was reached at a recent meeting when it was pointed out that similar problems and projects to face the Nebraska council are also engaging the attention of other conference schools. Prior to 1934 the convention had been held several years with a considerable degree of success, Nebraska having played host to the meeting at one time.

Although taking the initiative in arousing interest in the venture, Nebraska will make no bid for the proposed convention unless it is not desired by the other schools, Fischer announced.

"Just at present we are sounding out the other schools as to their opinions on the proposal which we hope will be favorable," he said. "Our plans are, of course, still in the formative stage, but we are making every effort to secure the interest and co-operation of every conference school in reviving the conference and making it a success."

General topics suggested by the Nebraska committee for discussion at the meeting included class organization, used book exchanges, general relations with faculty, chaperons, and general student government activities.

South Dakota versus Nebraska. That is the lineup for the debate on the controversial armament question. "Resolved, that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions," to be held Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Social Science auditorium. The Husker team of Charles W. Steadman and J. Leo McMahon will argue the negative against an affirmative pair from Dakota.

"The Dakota school has always been recognized for putting out one of the foremost debate squads in this part of the country, and on this subject which has caused continual comment recently in campus circles as well as in international centers, we expect the most interesting debate of the year," Prof. H. Adelbert White, coach of the Nebraska debaters, declared Monday. "The armament topic has been used in more debates throughout the country this year than any other question."

Stopping over but one night on their way back home, the South Dakota team will be returning from an engagement they are now holding with Kansas university. Professor White stated that the debate would prove a valuable source of material for discussion for the various peace and military groups on the campus.

In commenting on the contest to be held Wednesday night, Steadman, member of the Nebraska team, added, "In view of the present European crisis, the subject is very timely and important, and holds more world interest and attention than any other one present day problem."

The general public, especially students and faculty members, are invited to attend the affair.

BLUE-PRINT FEATURES COVER DESIGN ABOUT NEBRASKA'S CAPITOL

March Issue Contains Many Articles of Interest to Architects.

Offering a complete array of features for architectural students, the Nebraska Blue Print student engineering publication, is expected to present its March issue the latter part of this week, it was reported by Prof. L. B. Smith, head of the architectural department, who is in charge of this month's issue.

Contained in the publication are two student articles, "Cathedral at Reihems" by Paul Rader and "Modern Construction" by Kenneth Clark. Rader describes the features and relates the history of the cathedral with excerpts taken from his English term paper. Professor Smith stated. Modern building materials are considered by Clark and student viewpoints relative to the materials are also presented.

Among student reproductions made in architectural classes, a drawing of the Nave Cathedral by Verner Meyer, an archeological design and an illustration of a map of Paris are published.

The cover design for the issue is a unique bit of work, Professor Smith pointed out. A plan of the old Roman Forum appears in the background with a number of other buildings of the world leading to the Nebraska state capitol sketched in the foreground. "The design is to the point, historic, and is with local application," he said.

Prosecution Wins Decision in First Round of Libel Battle

Decision for the first round in the epic battle the senior laws are staging in their mock law suit over an alleged libelous Daily Nebraskan article was cast in favor of the plaintiff, Congressman H. Ayre Blower. In Monday afternoon's special appearance called by Maurice Akin and Howard Gillespie, attorneys for the twenty-four defendants, Judge Charles B. Nutting, the honorable judge in whose court the case is appearing, overruled the appearance of the defense.

The court, in sustaining claims of the plaintiff's barristers, Herman Rosenblatt and Don Easterday, ruled against the special appearance as to all two dozen defendants.

His honor proposed that the plaintiff's point that special appearance involved a plea to merits as to whether the article was libelous or not and so involving the subject matter of the action was well taken, and he therefore decided that the action was not valid on part of defendants. The court thereupon ordered the defendants to answer charges filed in the petition of plaintiff. The case was then set for trial at Thursday, (Continued on Page 2.)
