

Reds Trim Blacks 14-0 In First Spring Grid Scrimmage

ELDRIDGE SCORES BOTH TALLIES OF GRIDIRON TUSSLE

LaNoue Returns to Husker Backfield; Kicks Two Extra Points.

SCORE IN SECOND HALF

Black Defense Crumbles Under Pounding by Scarlet Backs.

Jerry LaNoue sent his educated toe into the leather pigskin with all the drive of a Dempsey punch and most of the precision of a pointed gun, and the sphere sailed from Henry "Chief" Bauer's fostering finger for a perfect strike across the goal posts to write the final line to the final score, "Reds 14, Blues 0."

The marksmanship of the flashy Wisner speed merchant added the last finishing touch to the first regulation game of the Husker spring football season Tuesday afternoon, both grid units scampering off the practice lawn after the concluding bullseye was chalked up. Blocked by the wiles of old man winter in their attempt to conduct the first set-to of the spring season last Saturday and prevented Tuesday from playing on the soggy field left by the blustery gentleman's untimely appearance, the Husker gridsters refused to be put off longer and staged the fracas on the back yard lawn.

And certainly the prospective varsity enthusiasts bearing the Scarlet banner felt no less complacency in their victory over the valiant Blackshirts over their 14 to 0 verdict. After a grimly fought first half battle which left both squads out in the cold without a point, the first-string eleven came back in the last half to cross the final stripe twice and follow up with after-point marks.

Ralph Eldridge, Norfolk ball lugger, was the lad who did the dirty work in the scarlet offensive lineup, stuffing both touchdowns into his trophy case. The first tally for the Crimson came late in the second quarter, the successor to a scoring drive which had carried the Dana men within three yards of the money late in the second quarter. Jerry LaNoue started the assault with a 35 yard pass to Eldridge. But the Blues stuck to their guns and refused the Reds entrance into the promised land, kicking the ball out of danger after the attackers had lost their opportunity on downs.

But the second assault had a different ending. Jerry LaNoue carried the pigskin across the scoring gateway, but stepped outside on the 2-yard line. The Blacks took possession on a fumbled pass and kicked down the field again. LaNoue snaked the ball into touch-down range again and Ralph Eldridge bucked the line for the first six points. LaNoue kicked goal, Bauer holding.

It was pretty much of a back and forth tilt at the beginning of the fourth stanza, the Blacks equalling their first-half defensive tactics in holding the first squad away from the prize. But Eldridge and Bauer started on a scoring drive again, taking the inflated pellet to the vicinity of the 25-yard mark. Eldridge got loose around left end on a 25 yard run for the end, shaking off two tacklers to cross standing up. LaNoue kicked the point and the first game of the year was history.

Coach Bible sent every man in suit into the lineup, assuring every prospect an opportunity to show his wares. The starting cast for the Scarlet color bearers had Elmer Dohrmann and Paul Amen at end; Ladas Hubka and Johnnie Williams at guard; Wally DeBrown and Fred Shirey at tackle; and Paul Morrison at the snaphack berth. Harris Andrews called signals in the backfield, with Ralph Eldridge and Ronald Douglas at halfback and Jerry LaNoue at fullback. The Blacks lineup at the commencement of hostilities placed Griffen and Orvald Kildebeck at the pass-snatching jobs; Clyde White and William Glenn at guard; Seidell and Klum at tackle. Charles Wheeler held down the center position, shooting the ball to a backfield composed of Art Ball at quarter, Jack Dodd at fullback, and Bill Bauer and Harold Brill at halfback.

Will Durant, John Stachey Concur In Decentralization of Wealth Plan

(Daily Californian.)
Agreeing that decentralization of wealth is essential to the maintenance of the capitalist system, but differing sharply in their opinions of its possibility, Will Durant, philosopher and author, and John Stachey, British labor party member and economist, presented a spirited discussion of "America's Way Out" at the Philharmonic auditorium Monday evening on a Modern Forum program.

"Life is based on struggle," Durant asserted. "The strong will always win—the weak—in civilization, thru 'due process of law.' Power may be leveled off and redistributed—but how long will it remain that way?" Shelving communism as an intolerable solution because of its denial of civil liberties as well as its impracticability, Durant promised for America either the entire breakdown of modern civilization with a return for a thousand years to the Middle Ages, or the reform and revival of a modified capitalist regime.

Not caring to state which alternative would prevail, the white-headed philosopher drew a picture of a state combining the best features of socialism and capitalism, based on state ownership of natural resources, with individual initiative left comparatively free for industrial initiative. This state, he explained, could be reached thru wealth decentralization by means of income and inheritance taxes, "moral" education against exploitation, and government control of in-

HARDAGE ALL PRAISES FOR SOONER GRIDDERS

Oklahoma Coach Completes Spring Grid Sessions With Game.

NORMAN, March 18—Four light backs and two line-men of the Blue team that fought the much heavier and more experienced Whites to a 13-3 score in the practice game here Wednesday that ended Oklahoma's 1935 spring football drill, were praised warmly by Coach Lewis Hardage today.

"Boudreau, Baer, Huddleston and Gene Corrotto, light, freshmen backs, did well on the defense and capitalized their lone offensive chance, although pitted against tough opposition and playing nearly the whole game without a substitute. Now we know we can put those fellows in a game and depend upon them," Hardage said. "Baer showed us he is a 'money' player and an excellent quarterback prospect," went on the coach. "His 51 yard field goal was beautifully kicked and could have carried farther. Barnett, a guard, and Sprinkle, center, also showed up well.

The Sooner mentor also was pleased with his varsity line, praising chiefly the defensive skill against passes and runs exhibited by Mickey Parks, 220 pound varsity center.

"Miskovsky played a fine game at end," Hardage added. "He has recovered from his ankle injury of last fall and was a standout Wednesday, catching passes beautifully, stopping the other team on defense and blocking his tackle expertly. Smith and Willis also showed promise of being valuable additions.

"We also were pleased with the offensive blocking of Ellsworth and Tennyson, tackles. Short, a big boy from Okmigea, looks like our best tackle prospect among the freshmen. He is smart and shows lots of defensive ability. Ball, Farquhar and Walker, freshmen guards, looked good for yearlings, too."

Hardage pointed out that because of injuries, laboratory classes and participation in other sports, such players as McDannald, Montgomery, Brown, Fuqua and Cason could not participate in the final practice game. J. R. Corbett, freshman back from Amarillo, Tex., and the best passer on the squad in the coach's opinion, was ill with influenza.

University of Pennsylvania, the Mimes Club of Michigan, the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard, the Black Friars of the University of Chicago, and the Haresfoot Club of the University of Wisconsin.

"All our girls are men yet everyone's a lady" used to be the slogan of the Haresfoot club, whose directors first announced the change. This year their football players will be "he-man" reporters in a newspaper story, with no charming Art Ballew or pony choruses. Henry Kosman, Kosmet Klub business manager, questioned the possible success of such a change. "In my short acquaintance with the pulse of a theater-going public, I have learned that no 'Journey's End' cast can successfully put over a musical comedy," he asserted. "There has been a change in the audience reaction toward all male choruses; a pair of spindly legs going through chorus routines is no longer an innovation. But in keeping Kosmet Klub a men's organization by preserving the all-male cast tradition, we are not relying on that one novelty to make the show interesting," he added. "The show this year, for in-too bad that the university is so split up into colleges that a true class spirit has never been fomented before. I will certainly be glad to do anything that I can get the class started right."

Additional reports were made on various details of the dance by members of the committee, and Marjorie Filley, who is in charge of refreshments, commented, "The refreshment division of the senior committee has plans well underfoot to satisfy hungry seniors' appetites at the senior party."

Thirty-one pledges of Scabbard and Blade, honorary advanced drill fraternity, were initiated Tuesday evening following a banquet at the Lindell hotel, according to Charles Galloway, president of the group.

a fine team, but we have been working diligently in order that we might be well-prepared. Both Leo and I hope that a good-sized group of outsiders will come to hear the debate, for it always gives both teams more spirit if they have someone to talk to, insuring a real debate. And also, I think anyone will get a great deal of pleasure in hearing a discussion of arms reduction." Steadman also pointed out that there were highly favorable comments made on the negative case which they will present this evening at Denver, and the arguments have been improved upon since.

Anybody is welcome to attend the debate, and students and faculty members are especially urged to come.

The youngest freshman ever enrolled at Long Island university (New York) is Isidor Kosofsky, age 13, but he doesn't like to be called a "prodigy."
