Attend the Senior Meeting.

MEMBERS of the senior class today will turn from business to pleasure. Last week end they attended the tea dance, planned as the first move in the campaign to solidify the graduating class.

The committee is faced with no easy task. In the first place it must secure and hold the support of the class. This in itself is a man-sized job.

Provision must be made for some sort of an executive body which in the future will take charge of the work from year to year. This, at the present time, is providing the biggest problem.

Projects which will undoubtedly prove of future benefit to the university are under way. Every senior is urged to do his part by attending the meeting tonight.

Working Their Way.

FIFTY percent of the men and 35 percent of the women on the Nebraska campus are helping themselves through school by the sweat of their collective brows, according to figures released recently by university officials.

Students who are having a tough struggle with financial difficulties in their dash for a degree would do well to ask themselves if they are receiving all that they should from their university work. Are they, handicapped as they are by extra work, able to assimilate enough to repay them for the time and energy spent?

Our elders are fond of telling about the long hours they spent in raking up enough cash to pay for their educations, but at the same time they will admit that it might not have been worth the candle.

Students today have had the same experience. With senses dulled by hours of work, or by the late hours necessary in order to make up for time lost through outside labor, textbooks and classrooms are not as attractive as they might be.

Students who are willing to work in order to go to school are to be commended for their earnestness and seriousness in the quest for knowledge. But the serious doubt about whether they receive in full measure what they expend still remains.

A Word to the New Corn Cobs.

LAST night you became members of Corn Cobs, the Nebraska chapter of Pi Epsilon Pi, national pep organization. Within a short time you will take over active control of the chapter, and what the Cobs will write into the record book next year will be within your control.

The record of the organization during the past few years has been none too bright. It has suffered from the same ailments that have infected all other campus activities—lethargy and too much petty politics. Last year the group was suspended by the Student Council for inactivity and for too much political maneuvering.

The organization was left back on the campus last year under a new constitution and the promise that it would rebuild itself into a real and functioning pep group. Despite the loss of its chief source of revenue, it has done that to a great extent.

And yet there is more room for improvement. Tassels, the women's pep organization, has distinguished itself for its activity. The men need not lag behind. There has been an indication this year that in the near future control of rallies will be given back to the pep organizations.

The campus is in need of activity groups that actually function. On the other hand the campus should not hesitate to use the pruning shears on deadwood. It is for the new Corn Cobs to place their group definitely out of the latter class.

Campus Males Go Hirsute

UNIVERSITY HANDBALL TOURNAMENT NEARS FINISH

Weiner, Mandell, Graetz Win Singles' Laurels To Date.

The all university handball tournament is progressing rapidly towards its finish. A very good brand of handball is being exhibited by all contestants.

In matches played to date results were as follows: Singles: Weiner beat Goldware 21 to 13, 21 to 17; Mandell beat Herms Meyer 21 to 14, 21 to 16; and Rosenstein defaulted to Graetz. Doubles: Mandell and Weiner advanced to the semifinals beating Goldware and Rosenstein 21 to 9, 21 to 12. Epstein and Reikes went into the finals winning 21 to 9, 21 to 12.

BOUCHER TO TALK ON CHICAGO PLAN AT JOINT DINNER

Announcements of these two meetings have been sent to over 500 members of the two societies living in or near Lincoln. Students from the honor list of the university and families of interested students also received invitations to hear Dean Boucher.

Phi Beta Kappa is the oldest of Greek letter fraternities, being founded in 1776 at William and Mary college, and was chartered at the university in 1896. It is now composed of 118 collegiate chapters acting as a unit under the name of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa.

Sigma Xi is the oldest honorary scientific society in the collegiate world, having been founded at Cornell University in 1885, and was organized on this campus in 1897. The chief basis of election to membership is ability for independent research in scientific fields, as demonstrated while an undergraduate or as a graduate doing scientific work.

Pictures Taken By Hufnagle to Appear in Paper

Exceptional pictures taken by Richard Hufnagle, University of Nebraska photographer, will soon appear in the rotogravure section of the Omaha World Herald, according to Dr. Kollmorgen of the conservation survey department.

Last fall four of his prints were accepted by the Rochester Athenaeum and Mechanics Institute for display at the second annual exhibition of professional photography held at Rochester. Outstanding photographers from all over the world contributed to this exhibition and of the thousands of pictures submitted, only 155 were hung.

Outside of his routine work as the campus photographer, Mr. Hufnagle spends much time taking shots of local subjects. His pictures are unique in that they preserve the true color of the subjects. His most valuable set of pictures is a 100 plate box of natural color Nebraska capitol pictures which he spent nine months photographing.

COLORADO ASKS PWA FOR BUILDING FUNDS

Plans for Six Structures at Boulder Submitted by University.

(By College News Service.) BOULDER, Colo.—Plans for a huge building program, entailing requests for PWA funds totaling $2,297,500, were submitted by the University of Colorado to George M. Bull, Colorado state engineer for the federal emergency administration.

The projects propose six buildings on the Boulder campus and numerous improvements at the school of medicine in Denver.

COMMITTEES ARRANGE FOR OFFICERS' DINNER

Regimental Sponsors Club Members Invited to Attend.

Committees in charge of planning the annual Reserve Officer's Training Corps banquet which will be held Wednesday, April 10, at 8:30 at the Lincoln hotel for all junior and senior officers, are now beginning to function, according to Colonel Charles Galloway, chairman of the arrangements committee.

Major Charles Steadman, head of the invitations committee, announced that the Regimental Sponsors club will be invited to attend this affair which is one of the most important functions of the military department during the year. Tickets will be out soon, stated Major Henry Kosman, chairman of the tickets committee. Speakers for the dinner and special guests have not as yet been named.

Assisting Colonel Galloway with the arrangements are Major Tom Davies, co-chairman, Captains L. Palmer, D. Sowles, L. Carlson, M. Smith, and J. Rhea. Captains M. Moravec, W. Garlow, R. Rider, and T. Cruise will help Major Kosman with the distribution of tickets. With Major Steadman in charge of invitations are Captains B. Moore, A. Broady, D. Hedgecock, M. Dunklau, and H. Marsden.

DELTS WIN CROWN IN BASKETBALL CONTEST

Group Sinks 68 Out of 100 Tries in Free Throw Tournament.

Delta Tau Delta was crowned intramural basketball free throw champion Wednesday night with a total number of 68 shots made out of 100. Acacia and Phi Delta Theta were second with 65.

Rollin "Bud" Parsons lead the Delts team with 17 out of 20 shots. The leading scorer of the tournament, however, was Eddie Anderson of Alpha Gamma Rho with 18 successes out of 20 tries. Following the two leading fraternities these came as follows: Phi Kappa Psi, 63; A. G. R., 62; A. T. O., 61; Sigma Nu, 59; Theta Chi, 59; Pi Kappa Alpha, defending champions 57, and Beta Theta Pi, 55.

In winning the meet the Delts had to overcome a two point lead held by Acacia in the preliminary round. A surprise was sprung by Phi Delta Theta which went from tenth to second place. The two fraternities tied for second will play off to determine the sole occupant of second place.

Aside from the basketball a postponed volleyball game was played. Sigma Alpha Mu trounced Lambda Chi Alpha in two straight games 15 to 13, and 15 to 5. The Sammys got off to a good start and won the second game handily.

Everybody Knows Him.

An apple a day may keep the doctor away, but according to many of the best authorities on the subject, a well-polished apple is the best insurance against keeping low grades out of the professor's record. That is, figuratively speaking.

The apple polisher is a familiar figure at Pennsylvania. He swaggers into class, brushing by his classmates in an effort to be the first to catch the instructor's glance. He tries to lead every discussion in class, and usually manages to repeat the professor's own thought in slightly different words, passing the idea off as his own.

If a classmate falters during a recitation his hand is the first to reach for the ceiling. He is a past master at reciting with his book open in his lap.

But the confirmed apple polisher is at his best at the close of class. He regrets that there are only ten minutes between periods, but he has learned to make the most of his brief opportunity. When class is dismissed, he makes a dash for the desk at the front of the room, and engages the not-too-interested professor in conversation upon any point. The topic is unimportant; the main thing is to allow his personality to radiate and impress his subject so completely that the name of Jules Cohen cannot possibly escape the memory of the most absent-minded professor.

The strange truth about the matter is that this shallow individual actually gets past first base with his superficial tactics. But he pays for his grades whether he realizes it or not. If being despised by everyone who sees him in operation is not a handsome price for an A—we've got the wrong slant on the whole situation.

House of Mirth.

No longer do we have to turn on radio programs featuring Sloop-nagle and Budd, Fred Allen, or even Joe Penner, in a desperate search for amusement. We have merely to listen to Hugh Johnson caterwauling about "musical blatant bunk from the rostrum of religion" in reference to Father Coughlin, or another "Pied-Piper (Huey Long) looting; on a penny whistle," all the while mixing his idioms in a grandiloquent style that is the despair of professional comedians. The newspapers also provide farcical tilts, with the highly electric crackles of the buffoon from Louisiana alternating with the heavy artillery of Senator Robinson. The wonder is that the professional comedians don't unionize in an attempt to preserve their interests and send a lobby to congress.

Congressional competition, however, seems to be well started, and we suspect that the honorable senators would regard this lobby with grave disapproval, as an attempt to impinge on their senatorial rights and privileges. The pity is that the radio, so justly famed for providing the populace with what they want, is not yet installed in our parliamentary chambers.

Some sorrow may be expressed by devotees when philharmonics, orchestras, radio dramas, and the like are forced off the ether; but carpers must remember that a greater good will be served. Who knows, the nation may laugh itself out of the depression, despite a few fatalities among the more weakly constituted, who are unable to stand the strain of an eight-hour laughing jag each day.

The possibilities have been only partly explored. "Stand by everybody. We are about to present the comic opera entitled 'The Kingfish Departs from his Baton Rouge Aquarium in an Attempt to Get in the National Swim.'" "A shark named Farley," continues the narrator, "is threatening to gobble up the miserable invader." And won't the senators howl with glee, and the radio listeners each rock back and forth in helpless mirth when they hear a few sombre stogoes inquire "what about the public works program and the future of the NRA."

CHANTS BY CHANGE.

A junior piano recital will be given by Evelyn Stowell, student with Herbert Schmidt, at 4 o'clock Thursday at the Temple theater. Laura Kimball, student with Alma Wagner, will assist Miss Stowell on the program.

It's pretty bad when a fellow like Era Lown of the University Player Lowns, goes in for white mice. It's worse, however, to coop said mice up in a two inch wire holder, which looks like a miniature popcorn popper. This poor creature was locked securely in this cage-affair, and on the outside of the cage was a hunk of cheese and a piece of stale doughnut. It is doubtful whether or not the little animal even got any air, as it was shoved in the cubby-hole of a certain faculty member's desk, when last seen, it is about two inches long and a very harmless looking creature, so if anyone should happen to take pity on it, they might plan a rescue party.

Elizabeth Bergner, celebrated star of German and English stage and screen successes, is playing as "Gemma Jones" in Margaret Kennedy's play, "Escape Me Never," now in its third week at the Schubert theater in New York City. Nova Pilbeam, the English star of "Little Friend" returned to the Broadway screen in the "Man Who Knew Too Much" at the Mayfair theater. Walter Connolly, star of stage and screen, is playing in "The Bishop Misbehaves" currently at the Golden theater, and next Sunday will give a special performance for the Stage Relief fund.

One of the largest audiences gathered this season for a dramatic production, filled the Temple theater Tuesday evening when Armand Hunter read "The Dark Tower" for his senior recital. As Mr. Hunter characterized the numerous characters of the play, his audience could practically visualize the entire production as it will be given here by the University Players from April 8 to 13. Hunter's powers of interpretation are forceful, and his audience hopes to see him in one of the parts when the play is given in its entirety.

"The Dominant Sex," the current London success which is being produced in this country by George Bushar and John Tuerk, who sponsored "Within the Gates," will have its first performance on this side of the Atlantic at the Garrick theater in Philadelphia. The author is Michael Egan, a young Britisher whose first play has been well received. The Broadway opening is set for next Monday evening at the Cort theater. Helen Chandler and Bramwell Fletcher will act the roles which Diana Churchill and Richard Bird are acting at present abroad.

Another arrival scheduled for Broadway during the first week of April is "Potash and Perlmutter," a revival of the popular old comedy by Montague Glass and Charles Kline, first produced some twenty years ago. David Leonard, who had the "Perlmutter" role in London, will again appear, with Arthur S. Ross as "Potash."

Millicent Staley, in conjunction with Wenona Smith, is the composer of a song, "To the Best Dressed Girl at Nebraska University," which she will sing. This will be followed by the presentation of the best girl, whose identity will be kept secret until the Pollies are presented.

Ushers for the program are Jane Barbour, chairman, assisted by Jane Walcott, Mary Gavin, Jeanne Rowe, Winifred Nelson, Ariene Orcutt and Betty Cherney. The final dress rehearsal for the show was held Wednesday evening at which time all members of the cast appeared in costume. Properties and lighting effects were tested at this time.

Two professors from different universities had a little argument the last time they met, tells a columnist in the Ohio Lantern. The other day one of the gentlemen found facts that supported his side of the disputed subject. He smilingly wired his friend and awaited an answer. The other, a little miffed, wanted to send back the strongest, most expressive cuss word in his vocabulary. When the Western Union operator explained the ban on use of such words, he sent it in "pig Latin." The first professor figured out the code after three days of study.
