"Some people," he states, "will climb on up to the higher plane of civilization which awaits them, and others confused and unable to adjust themselves to more rarified surroundings will stay behind and drop to the side."

World Denounced War After Blind Submission of 1914-17

By LORAIN CAMPBELL.

A musty aroma rises from a group of newspapers published in this country during the World war. To the imaginative, there is also a mysterious scent of gunpowder and sanguinary trenches, in the dusty, yellow pages of these papers.

The Daily Nebraskan files during this period are a written confession of the way students rushed toward the front in blind submission. The following are a few samples of the editorial policy: "Of the class of almost 211 senior students at McGill university, Canada, all but ten have gone to the trenches in Europe. Many of them, it is said, are dead."

C. BOUCHER PRAISES CHICAGO UNIVERSITY EDUCATION METHODS

Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi Members Hear Dean at Tuesday Banquet.

"Students and faculty members would not abandon the present system in use at the University of Chicago under any circumstances," stated Dean C. S. Boucher of that institution Tuesday evening before the annual joint banquet of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi at the University club.

"There are only two distinctive phases to the plan," pointed out the dean, "the curricular and the measurement. Under our old system it was found to be practically impossible for the student to get a co-related education."

"The first two years or junior college period was devoted to general introductory courses in which general introductory courses were used. Students could not take all the introductory courses, so they were combined into four general divisions, the biological sciences, humanities, physical sciences and the social sciences."

Dean Boucher pointed out that the systems of grades, credits and hours have been abolished, and that in their place a battery of examinations is given, and when the student passes the junior college examinations, he is entitled to take work in the senior college.

Emotional Flag Waving. (The following excerpt from an editorial of this period, reveals the appeal to man's emotions, rather than to his reasoning). "We can put our patriotism to the test. It is to be regretted that there will be those who can see in the great war no more than servile banding to 'moneyed interests' who believe that the preservation of a life is to be better than giving it up for a cause—for an ideal."

Velora Beck played a piano solo, and Barbara DePutron led the devotionals. The vesper choir, directed by Margaret Phillips, sang the processional. The series of Lenten addresses, of which Professor Patterson's was the fourth, are being planned and carried out by the Y. W. vesper staff, under the leadership of Carolyn Kile.

STUDENT COUNCIL HEARS FIFTH IDEA FOR BOOK STORES

Special Committee Reports On System Maintained At Florida.

SHOP RUN BY UNIVERSITY Selling and Return Prices Both Stamped in Texts Before Sale.

Continuing their policy of acquainting the campus with types of book stores in operation in other schools, the special committee yesterday introduced the plan which has been found successful at the University of Florida.

In a letter from the Florida student council, the project at the southern university is described as operating under the business manager of the school and running expenses are paid out of the profits.

Books High in Florida. "The only difficulty that the store has to contend with is the fact that books are exceptionally high in the state of Florida, and students are prone to think that the book store is making a huge profit," stated the letter. "Local merchants do not complain of the policy because no local merchants handle textbooks," it continued.

The Florida plan is the fifth system to be discussed by the student council in its search for a method adaptable for use on the Nebraska campus. Plans in use at California, Minnesota, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Chicago universities have been presented by the special committee and are under consideration.

Virginia Seleck, chairman of the committee in charge of the survey, announced Tuesday that results of the poll taken last fall, at which students expressed opinions on the exchange, will be announced some time this week.

Miss Seleck expressed gratitude at the response given to the suggested project. She stated that with university cooperation the need of Nebraska students for a book exchange will soon be met.

Prof. Russel, in association with other members of the agronomy staff has been studying subsoil moisture on a number of soils through the state. Visitors are welcome.

"Students today are demanding more for their dollars spent in education than ever before," asserted Dean C. S. Boucher of the University of Chicago Tuesday morning before an all university convocation, at which new members of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi were formally announced for the first time.

Using as his theme, "The Form vs. Content in Education," Dean Boucher in his introductory remarks pointed to a recent investigation by one of the large public utilities companies in the United States which disclosed that there is a close correlation between achievement in high school, college and graduate and professional school with success and achievement after leaving school.

"Educators are now forced to study what they are doing more than ever before," proceeded Dean Boucher. "In the pioneer days buildings were crude, just four walls and a roof. Now buildings are constructed on a basis of quality. Automobiles were first built on a quantity basis; now competition is on a quality basis. Education has passed through the same stages. We have now reached the quality point in education."

"When the early colleges and universities of the United States were in their pioneer stages, all students took the same courses. This continued until the time of the Civil war after which students demanded new courses. Harvard responded to this demand by allowing one elective in the senior year. Then electives were given in the junior year, then the sophomore, and the freshman years. This development reached to such a point that some schools had only one required course, freshman English."

"During this time no educational guidance was offered to students, so students went from one extreme to another. Some took introductory courses in all fields, (Continued on Page 2.)

CONFERENCE STAFF TO SPONSOR REVIEW BY MRS. ROY GREEN

'Forty Days of Musa Dagh' Topic of Discussion Friday Night.

BOOK BANNED BY HITLER

Members of the conference staff of the Y. W. C. A. are sponsoring a book review of "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," by Franz Werfel, to be given by Mrs. Roy Green, Friday, April 5, at 7:30 o'clock in Ellen Smith hall. The review is open to the public, and tickets may be purchased from members of the staff.

The story to be reviewed is based on historical fact. It relates the heroic drama of a little band of Armenians who spent forty days on the top of the mountain, Musa Dagh, while a war was raging below. During this time they were completely cut off from the rest of the world, and struggled against great odds to preserve their lives. So important is this episode of their history to the Armenian people, that they have set aside a national holiday in its honor.

The book, termed as "undesirable" by the Hitler regime, will be reviewed by Mrs. Green, a former adviser to the Y. W. C. A. In announcing the event Gladys Klopp, in charge of arrangements, stated that the review should be of interest both to members of the faculty and to students.

"The speaker," she said, "has appeared before many Lincoln groups, and is rated as exceptional. The book itself is well recommended and rich in excitement and power."

Members of the conference staff who are assisting Miss Klopp in the arrangements are: Jean Wall, in charge of the ticket sales, and her assistants, Eloise Benjamin, Mary Yoder, Henrietta York, Margaret Moran, Jean Gist, Jean Nelson, Doris Brandes, Jean Barbour, Hazel Kolves, Virginia Keim and Hazel Bradstreet.
