CAMPUSOCIETY

THE FAMILIAR PLATFORM AND piles of weathered boards indicate to Nebraska students who have been here long enough to know what it's all about, that one of the oldest Cornhusker traditions is close upon us. This coming Thursday, palpitating Greeks will assemble on the green just north of Administration to watch the most hopeful of the young hopefuls be tapped or masked as the case may be, and, if what rumor says is true, more excited Barbs will gather to watch the May queen crowned. Of course speculation is worth practically nothing, but it's fun to wonder if the Innocents will choose the usual thirteen, and who the Mortar Board president will be. Questions such as this will be answered, we trust to everybody's satisfaction right soon now. Until then, try to restrain the well known impatience, and go on just as though the most important event of the school year were going to come next year instead of next Thursday.
