ADMINISTRATION TO CONSIDER NEW BOOKSTORE PLAN

Shurtleff, Hill to Appear Before Regents for Committee.

DRIVE TO CLOSE FRIDAY

Plan Combines Outstanding Features of Those at Other Schools.

Fate of the proposed second hand book exchange will be in the hands of the administration today when the student council bookstore committee places a petition for the consideration of tentative plans for the project before the administration to be taken up at the next meeting of the board of regents.

Announcement that the petition for the plan was ready for consideration by the regents was made by Virginia Selleck, chairman of the committee, after the group had held several meetings for the purposes of revising and making corrections in the original plan presented to the group last week.

The plan in its present form combines what are believed by the committee to be the best features of plans now in operation in other universities over the country. It asks for an exchange modeled after the regent's bookstore and provides for eventual consolidation with it. A definite percentage is to be subtracted from the original price of each book in order to cover salaries and overhead costs.

Shurtleff, Hill Appointed. Don Shurtleff and Irving Hill have been appointed to appear before the board of regents at their next meeting and they expect to have a few minutes in which to explain the petition asking for an exchange.

Lorraine Hitchcock, who has been corresponding with other colleges on ways to dispose of out of date texts, is compiling the answers she has received and will present her report at the next meeting of the committee. A majority of the colleges contacted expressed a desire for some sort of a national organization whereby uni- (Continued on Page 3.)

Logic Class Concocts Yarns; Physicists Declare 'No Base'

By Ed Murray.

Concocting a series of tall tales on the border line between superstitious fantasy and debatable fact, members of Professor Bousma's 11 o'clock logic class engaged in a prolific discussion of what people think and why during the Wednesday session, May 15. The "what people think" part disclosed some yarns worth recounting, but little emphasis was placed on the why.

After running its course thru a motley array of old superstitions such as the black cat, horseshoe, rabbit's foot, ladder, the number 13, three on a match, and others, the tale telling focused on an especially productive source of yarns, namely the effect of vibrations.

The whole thing began when somebody recalled that soldier's break step before starting to cross a bridge. It seems that the steady impact of the cadenced step of a marching army sets the bridge into vibration and finally breaks it. According to Prof. H. H. Marvin of the physics department the first and probably the only occasion when a bridge actually gave way was during the Crimean War at a bridge near Manchester.

The idea of breaking bridges by transmitting to them the vibrational energy of some other body gained considerable ground or at least interest, when some one else (Continued on Page 4.)

Twenty-three states are represented, the Wisconsin delegation being the largest in attendance. Three delegates from New York City, four from Oregon, and one from Hawaii represent the greatest distances traveled.

It consists of a large chronological chart representing the activities of the university extension division since its beginning in 1909. Supplementary smaller charts and graphs show the growth and principal landmarks of each extension project.

Motion pictures are being run continuously thruout the day for the visitors' entertainment. Under the supervision of the University of Nebraska publicity department, the pictures show outstanding campus activities and places and things of interest about the university.

In addition to the general sessions and round tables conducted Wednesday, a tea at Morrill hall was the chief entertainment feature of the day. Nearly fifty (Continued on Page 3.)

Little Gods Galley

LOUISE HOSSACK, MAID OF HONOR.

By Regina Hunkins.

Foremost of Louise Hossack's assertions about herself was that she "doesn't like publicity." Perhaps this dark haired young lady would much rather remain at home unnoticed than to have her name and life placed before the public through the columns of the daily paper.

But here it is. For we think there is no one who would be of more interest to the readers than the girl who served as Maid of Honor for the May Queen at the Ivy Day festivities, and who has made herself known in such a variety of ways during her four years on the campus.

As president of Tassels, girls' pep organization, Louise has led the group in their enthusiastic boosting for the university athletes during the past year. She has also served as national presi-
