UNIVERSITY PLAYERS REVIVE PAST SUCCESS

end of the summer production successfully for the past several years during which it has been given.

Each summer the University Players revive one of their last season's hits for the benefit of the Fred Ballard scholarship fund. This fund was established in honor of the famous Nebraska alumnus, four years ago when the Players presented the world premiere of Ballard's "Golden Goose." Under the terms a sum amounting to his tuition is granted each semester to a deserving student. Armand Hunter was the last to receive the scholarship.

Scenery for the play is being handled by Herbert Yenne's Speech 101 class. Fans have been installed in the theater for the benefit of summer patrons. Tickets are thirty-five cents and may be secured at the door.

The cast of ten players has started intensive rehearsals for the play which Mr. Yenne has described as "typically Moliere."

SPANISH PLAY GIVEN BY DRAMATICS CLASS

Two-Act Production Part Of Examination in Speech Course.

A two-act costume play is now being rehearsed for presentation in the Temple theater on Wednesday, Aug. 7, at 7:30 p. m., according to Prof. Herbert Yenne. This production, which appears in a Spanish setting, marks the culmination of eight weeks of intensive study and actual production for the students of Yenne's speech 101 course.

"It is a difficult play," declared Yenne, "depending entirely on characterization. Altho humorous, it is more drama than comedy or farce." The performance will comprise part of the final examination for those taking part in it.

Those who have roles are Mrs. Nora Osborn, Marie Galena, Mrs. Helen Tysell, Saryl Selinger, Mrs. Mary Holm, Lydia Endorf, Heral Hedgcock, Caryl Selinger, Mrs. Mary Holm, Lydia Endorf, Heral Hedgcock, Berneice Cruise, Era Lown, Blanche Barnes, and Orville Bartlette.

Prof. Penton does not consider the age of this tree at all remarkable. The oldest tree in the world, he says, is a Cypress tree which is growing down in Mexico and is 6,500 years old.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND With DOROTHEA FULTON.

Wandering around the campus in quest of an answer to that good old question of whether or not the Joe college type of student is disappearing in favor of the serious minded student proved futile. Efforts to make the reticent summer sessionist talk are discouraging to say the least, when answers such as "How do you spell Joe?" or "Well, no, I hardly think so," appear after much concentration on the part of the questioner.

About as futile but infinitely more amusing was an effort made to get an interview with Dr. J. M. Reinhart on a proposed trip to Haiti, where it is rumored the whites stand to the side of the street while the negroes pass. A reporter, not quite sure of her pronunciation, called about the trip and Dr. Reinhart remarked that he had often been told to go to Hades, but wondered why any one would want to print it.

The contrast between the conversation of summer and winter students is rather pointed for one who has attended both sessions. The remark, "Will you come to the library with me, Francis? We can get our French there" supplants "Come on Janey, there's a bridge game at the Moon." And learned discussions on Kent's theories overheard in "Sosh" have replaced heated tid-bits about the merits of one gal's ankles as compared with another's. Manifestations of such enthusiasm must be encouraging to professors tired of drumming knowledge into unresponsive heads.

Inseparable as Rosalind and her Celia are two girls that one sees every day in the halls of Social Science. One slim and dark, the other tall and fair, and both so interested in one another as to be practically oblivious to what is happening around them.

Youth is always with us. Lined up outside the library yesterday behind an iron railing were five little boys tossing pennies into the grass beyond and then scrambling madly to get them. And on beyond another child climbing a tree, her pigtailed flying, while an older sister tried vainly to get her down.

Nothing looks quite so inviting with a long walk ahead of one in the sun as any kind of a car, but the ones running around the campus this summer pass all hopes. There is a long low brown roadster, equipped with a radio, and another grey one with cool looking leather cushions. A decided comparison between the prosperity of the summer and winter students when such limousines dominate the scene that once held red Model T's, and better runabouts that had to be started in high.
