Gayle Caley Calls Meeting Oct. 7 of Sport-Minded Women Students.

All barb girls interested in joining an intramural team are asked to meet at the women's gymnasium Monday at 5 o'clock, according to an announcement made by Gayle Caley, in charge of barb team organization.

"All girls not already members of an intramural team are asked to attend the meeting," Miss Caley announced. "It will not be necessary for all the girls who sign up for teams at this meeting to participate in all the sports. They will be given a chance to sign up for those sports in which they are interested."

The purpose of the meeting is to organize the teams for the coming intramural season. Team captains will be elected and girls will be assigned to the different teams. The plans for participation in the soccer, basketball, tennis, and volleyball intramural program, will also be made. Ruth Fulton, in charge of the tournament which will start next Thursday, will speak on the rules of the game and the way in which the tourney will be run off.

D. MARSHALL PLACES IN SPEAKING CONTEST

Dale Marshall of Pawnee City, Neb., who won first place in the Future Farmers of America speaking contest held last spring at the agricultural college in connection with the annual state contests for boys in Smith-Hughes high schools won fourth place in the regional contest held at Waterloo, Ia. The regional contest is one of four held in the nation at large, and twelve states were represented at Waterloo. Marshall's subject was "The Education of the Farm Family."

CARDWELL MAKES FIRST TOUCHDOWN

The secondary dragged him down. And immediately after the first Husker counter, Jerry found himself for the first time this season.

Jerry returned Poole's kickoff 15 yards to the Husker 20-yard marker, and on the next play skirted to the Nebraska 45 before tossing the ball to Henry Bauer, who was finally stopped on the Iowa State 30. Cardy slapped on 7 more, and Jerry advanced 9 more to the Cyclone 14. But Cardwell's 7 and LaNoue's 6-yard gains went for naught, for a penalty disrupted the Husker advantage and gave Iowa State the ball.

"Goodbye Touchdown." That situation was typical of many that followed. Just before the half, Coach Blins sent in Kenneth McGinnis at guard, Jack Ellis at tackle, Ron Douglas at full, Harold Holmbeck at tackle, and Bob Mehring at center. This new combination took the ball on Nebraska's 45-yard line, and with Douglas, LaNoue and Cardwell doing the carrying, came to rest one minute before the half on Iowa's 4-yard line. But Douglas fumbled, and it was goodbye touchdown.

The second half starting lineup was the same as the first, with the exception of Eldridge for Cardwell and LaNoue at Benson's half. Jerry proved his worth by intercepting a pass on his 34-yard line, and then reeling off screeching gains of 9 and 15 yards to the Cyclone 3-yard line. But the Iowa line did a little holding of its own, and Jerry, Sam Francis, and Toby Eldridge were thrown for losses that never were made up.

Cardwell opened Second Half. Cardwell reposed on the bench all during the second half, but he wasn't missed particularly. Johnny Williams, who had a great day at the Husker left guard, leaped for Poole's punt, partially stopped it, and knocked it at Dohrmann who picked it up and slid to the Iowa State 22-yard line. A lateral, one of the many that brightened the Husker play all afternoon, went from Francis to Richardson to Eldridge, was good for 14 yards, and Jerry LaNoue, in three plays, fought and drove through the line and the secondary for the second touchdown.

Lanoue rang up 12 yards on the kickoff, and Toby Eldridge raced 43 to the Iowa State 30 yard line, but was called back because of a penalty, and Gustine brought in the Iowa State 6 pointer on the next play.

But the game wasn't over. With only a few minutes remaining, Bauer rammed 16 yards closer to the Iowa goal and a lateral, Bauer to Dohrmann to Francis was good for 6 more on Iowa's 10 yard line. But the men from Ames took the ball on downs and fired passes all over the place in desperation, trying to bring in another touchdown to tie the score.

Dohrmann Scores.

But they didn't connect and the Huskers spilled Alender for an 8-yard loss on his 5-yard mark. With one minute remaining in the game, Tommy Neal fired one last gambling pass, from the end zone, and Elmer Dohrmann reaching for it with his stratospheric arm, just managed, and fell over the goal line with the final touchdown. Sam Francis missed the try-for-point, the first time this year.

A crowd of 11,000 stood up and cheered while the Husker big guns were firing their cadenzas of yardage at the Iowa State ramparts. And not one of them but had to admit that while the Cyclone line was nothing to sneeze at, it was no match for the Husker artillery.

Not only was the Husker victory the first carving in the niche which the Nebraska army is out to hew at the top of the Big Six, but it gives them a clean slate for Minnesota next Saturday. And inasmuch as none of the Scarlet players were injured, Cardwell escaping with a slight injury, the Gophers had better look out. The Iowa State game, considered a subtle danger spot, lodged as it was between the Chicago and Minnesota tilts, turned out to be another scoring fest, for the Huskers, although it seemed in those first few minutes that nothing short of the Allied trenches could stop the Cyclones. But the ill wind didn't "blow nobody good" and now it's "Look out, Minnesota!"

What a day! Ten thousand things to do before I could even go to class, and then, what classes! Seems to me I was never so dumb, or the right questions weren't asked or something! But then, just when I was drooping across the campus and wondering whether my parents hadn't made a mistake to send me to school at all—who should I bump into but that divine Bob Collier! Nearly took my breath away, and if he only knew how I'd longed for this chance he'd know why I could only gasp a "yes" when he asked how about a date! So I flew down to HOVLAND-SWANSON and had the most rapturous of times trying to decide which dress would simply bowl him over—and I found it. Ahhh, the phone! Pardon me dear diary, I know it's for me!

Possibility of General European War Dependent on Anglo-Italian Relations

Whether nations of the world will be embroiled in another international dispute is dependent largely upon whether or not England takes the field against Italy, in the opinion of Dr. Willem Van Royen, assistant professor of geography at the university and an authority on the European situation. Dr. Van Royen, in an interview Friday, said that while there is no immediate danger that the United States may become engulfed in the struggle now actually begun, there is grave danger for this country as well as the rest of the world if England swings into action.

"On the other hand," he stated, "Mussolini may be satisfied with having won a moral victory at Addwa, which in Italian minds is most significant in view of the defeat they suffered in a battle with the Ethiopians in 1896. After that conflict, Italy was forced to pay a large indemnity to the African nation and this has always rankled in Italian hearts.

Attack at Addwa Significant.

"It is especially significant that Mussolini decided to attack at Addwa. Either he is trying to avenge that earlier defeat, or he is using Addwa as the best natural opening into the heart of Ethiopia. If revenge is his object, then Italian troops may be withdrawn presently without further danger. Should however, Italy decide to gain possession of the land, it is bound to arouse Great Britain, because British land bordering the Nile is dependent for its water supply from the mountains of Ethiopia."

Dr. Van Royen believes England will not stand by and see Italy control this important water supply. And further, England's control of the Suez canal would be jeopardized.

As to the Ethiopian people, the university professor said that if they don't become frightened by their first tastes of modern war implements and retreat wisely to their plateau fortress, Mussolini

League's Powers Doubtful.

Should the conflict become more acute, Dr. Van Royen feels the League of Nations is not powerful enough to avert a world war.

"What good is a policeman without a gun?" he says. "The only way the league can become a powerful instrument of peace is through the medium of an international army to enforce her edicts. Would the United States be drawn into another world conflict? A chance for big profits is sometimes a deciding factor. Wasn't President Wilson elected on the pledge that he would keep us out of the last struggle?"

Rifle Club Campaigns For New Memberships

Sergeant C. F. McGimsey, in charge of rifle shooting in the university, continued to take applications for membership in the Rifle club Friday but urged more men to register for the club.

"Any man," declared McGimsey, "who has the slightest interest in rifle shooting is welcome to come to the rifle range in the basement of Andrews Hall and practice."

Applicants for membership in the club are given three weeks practice and then varsity and freshman teams are chosen by competition. Dues for membership in the organization are one dollar a year.

Painters Decorate Lawn When Kirsch Takes Artists Out

A botany class? A picnic? A sneak day? Such might have been the conjectures last Friday afternoon when Prof. Dwight Kirsch took his class in illustration to the grounds between the Library and Administration building for an outside lesson.

Artist Kirsch wants his class to try painting trees and as long as the weather stays mild will instruct the would-be designers in the wide open spaces.

It looked as though the university were developing a Latin quarter when close to twenty artists were scattered over the usually empty plot of land.

If the weather man predicts a mild winter, perhaps Mr. Kirsch should prepare for an increase in enrollment.
